FURTHER REGULATIONS

APPROVED BY THE TREASURY.

IN pursuance of the powers vested in their Lordships by the Friendly Societies Act, 1875, the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury hereby revoke the 19th, 20th, and 56th of the Regulations approved by them on the 8th December 1875, and do approve of the following Regulations in substitution therefor respectively :

(Substituted Regulations 19 and 20).

19. Societies and branches consisting wholly of members between 3 and 16 years of age, may be registered, provided they are—

(a.) In connection with some institution or school, and managed by the managers or teachers thereof, or by a committee appointed wholly or partly by such managers or teachers.

(b.) In connection with some society registered under the Act, or a branch of any such society, and managed by the committee or officers of such society or branch, or by persons appointed wholly, or partly by them.

20. The rules of every such society or branch shall contain provisions for the following matters in addition to those required in the case of societies by Schedule 4 of the Act, and Form A to these Regulations, and in the case of branches by Regulation 51.

1. Whether or not parents and guardians of members shall be entitled to be present, and vote at meetings of the society, and to perform acts of membership on behalf of their children.

2. The giving of security by the treasurer.

3. The investment of the funds in a savings bank, or in the public funds, or on Government or real securities, but not otherwise.

4. The acceptance of a member into a registered society or branch, or the payment to him of a share of the accumulated funds, if any, on his attaining the age of 16 years.

The forms annexed to Regulations 1 to 70, may be modified by authority of the Chief Registrar, to suit their application to juvenile societies or branches.

(Substituted Regulation 56).

56. The annual and quinquennial returns of a society with branches, shall include all branches of the society registered under the Act.

The valuation of a society with branches shall include all funds under the control of the central body of such society.

A registered branch shall in respect of the valuation of any fund or funds administered by itself, or by a committee or officers appointed by itself, be subject to the same obligations, and such branch, its officers or committee, shall be liable to the same penalties as if it were a registered society.

And in further pursuance of the said powers, their Lordships do approve of the following Regulations :—

70. No valuation of the assets and liabilities of a society or branch shall be deemed to be a valuation under the Act, where the person by whom the same is made (whether a public valuer or not) has audited the accounts of the society or branch for the year next preceding the date at which the society or branch is valued.

71. Where a society or branch desires that its assets and liabilities shall be valued and reported on by an Actuary to be named by the Registrar, the return of benefits and contributions, funds and effects, debts and credits, which the society or branch is required to make in form prescribed by the Chief Registrar, shall be accompanied with a fee on the following scale, viz. :—

If the number of members does not exceed 150	-	-	-	£. 10
If over 150, but not exceeding 250	-	-	-	15
250	"	"	350	20
350	"	"	500	25
500	"	"	700	40
700	"	"	1,000	55

with an additional 25 l. for every 500 members, or portion thereof beyond 1,000.

Where the number of members exceeds 2,500, a special fee shall be fixed by the Chief Registrar for the valuation.

72. If the Chief Registrar causes the assets and liabilities of a society or branch to be valued and reported on by the Actuary attached to the Central Office, the fee to be received for the same shall be paid into Her Majesty's Exchequer; but if he shall cause the same to be valued by any other Actuary, three-fourths only of the fee, as per Regulation 71, shall be paid to such Actuary, and the remaining one-fourth into Her Majesty's Exchequer.

Applications for Dispensing with Consents to Amalgamation, &c.

S. 24, proviso (c.) 73. Notice of an application that any of the consents and conditions prescribed for an amalgamation or transfer of engagements may be dispensed with, shall be advertised in the "Gazette" at least one month before application is made to the Chief Registrar in that behalf.

Such notice shall be in Form B A., hereto annexed.

74. The application that any of the consents and conditions prescribed for an amalgamation or transfer of engagements may be dispensed with, shall be in Form B B. hereto annexed, and shall be sent to the Chief Registrar in duplicate, with a copy of the "Gazette," in which the advertisement of the same is published.

75. If after hearing the trustees or committee of management and other persons whom he considers entitled to be heard, and to whom such notice shall be given as the Chief Registrar directs, the Chief Registrar thinks fit to entertain the application, he shall transmit a copy of the same to the Treasury for their consent thereto.

76. Where any consents or conditions prescribed for an amalgamation or transfer of engagements are dispensed with, Forms A B., A C., A D., A E., and A G., as the case may be, may be modified by authority of the Chief Registrar to suit the circumstances of the case.

77. In registering a special resolution for amalgamation or transfer of engagements, as prescribed by Regulation 38, where any prescribed consents or conditions have been dispensed with, the words "And confirmed by the Chief Registrar" shall be added after the word "Registered."

78. If on an application for dispensing with any prescribed consents or conditions to an amalgamation or transfer of engagements, more than one hearing or adjournment become necessary, the same fee shall be payable in respect of the same, as in the case of a dispute.

Fees on certain Investigations.

S. 25. 29. Where application is made for an investigation into the affairs of a society with a view to the dissolution thereof, upon the ground that the rates of contribution fixed in the rules of such society are insufficient to cover the benefits assured, the Chief Registrar may, if he thinks fit, at any time before making his award, require the payment of such fee as he may deem reasonable, not exceeding the scale fixed by Regulation 71, and such fee shall be paid in manner prescribed by Regulation 72.

REPORT of the CHIEF REGISTRAR of FRIENDLY SOCIETIES, for the Year ending 31st December 1876, pursuant to 38 & 39 Vict. c. 60, s. 10 (6), 39 & 40 Vict. c. 45, s. 25, and 34 & 35 Vict. c. 31, s. 17.

PART I.

I. INTRODUCTORY.

SINCE the date of the last Report, Mr. W. Sutton, of the London and Provincial Law Assurance Society, has been appointed actuary to the central office, and the additional clerk whose employment was authorised by the Treasury Letter of 9th June 1876 (ranking as a lower division clerk under the Order in Council of 12th February 1876), has entered upon his duties.

The Chief Registrar continues to receive very efficient assistance from his colleagues the Assistant Registrars, and from the staff generally. The Reports of the Assistant Registrars for Scotland and Ireland are appended hereto.

Report.

* Of these 40 were previously registered as societies, and had their registry as such cancelled.

† Of these 76 were existing societies, which were incorporated under the new Act.

‡ This figure includes societies under the Friendly Societies Act, Industrial and Provident Societies, and Trade Unions.

Report.

The fees received by the Registry Office (including Scotland and Ireland) amounted to 637 l. 11 s., being an increase of about 50 l. on the previous year's payments into the Exchequer.

A list of the societies and branches registered in 1876 under the Friendly Societies Act, will be printed in Part II. of this Report. Out of 118 Friendly Societies proper, 31 were registered for Lancashire, 13 for Middlesex, seven in York, and six each in Stafford and Glamorgan; and out of 13 working men's clubs, there were three each in Lancashire and Middlesex.

In his Report of last year, the Chief Registrar intimated that there had been "a great falling off in the number of applications by new societies" and in the number of rules "sent up finally for registry." The first Friendly Society which registered a complete amendment of its rules under the new Act, thereby accepting its provisions as a whole, was the Hulme Friendly Burial Society (Lancashire). It was not till the 1st April that the first new Friendly Society was registered, the Eye Medical Club (Suffolk), and this was not followed till the 24th, by the second, the Salesbury School Friendly Society (Lancashire). Thus the list of societies registered during the year represents those of nine months only. It was not till 26th May that the first branches were registered as such, those of the "United Patriots," a general society, which, on the occasion of a complete amendment of its rules, converted itself into a society with branches. The first separate society which converted itself into a branch, and the only one so converted before the passing of the Friendly Societies Amendment Act, 1876, was a lodge of the Norfolk and Norwich Unity of Odd Fellows (registered 28th July).

The total number of societies (or branches) registered, it will be observed, falls far short of that of last year, amounting only to 753, as against 1,296; the falling off extending to all classes of societies except the two smallest, trade unions and loan societies, which show an increase, but occurring mainly in respect of societies or branches under the Friendly Societies Acts, which fall from 823 to 357, or, deducting societies re-registered as branches, 317. The number of amendments registered is also diminished, but only to the extent of about one-fifth. In this case the falling off is in all classes, except co-operative societies, which show an increase, and trade unions, which remain at exactly the same figure.

The fact that the diminution in the number of new societies registered extended to all the three leading groups of societies, societies under the Friendly Societies Acts, Building Societies, and Co-operative Societies, seems to show that one general cause was at work, viz., as indicated in the last Report, the general depression of trade and industry. To the other causes of the diminution, also referred to in that Report as bearing upon Friendly Societies, the greater stringency of the new system, and the difficulties which arose in carrying out the Act of 1875 in respect of the affiliated orders, the Chief Registrar need not here revert. It is already certain that the year 1877 will show a considerable advance on its predecessor, the new societies and branches registered during the first six months amounting to 373, besides 327 conversions, making 700 for one half year of 1877, as against 753 for the whole of 1876. Of Friendly Societies, 119 had been registered by 3rd August, or one more than during all 1876, and over 400 branches had been converted, as against 40.

The Chief Registrar must, however, observe that in future, however largely the Friendly Societies' Acts may be resorted to, the number of separate societies newly registered is certain to fall far short of the apparent totals of former days, when branches had not been distinguished legally from societies. And since the federal type of society is largely extending in comparison with the individual, it will be to the number of branches registered, and not of societies, that the statist and politician will have to look more and more for an index to the development of Friendly Societies.

The pamphlet referred to in the Report for last year containing the memorandum for the guidance of societies and the principal provisions of the Acts, with references to the regulations, has been published, and a new edition of it is in the press.

The Chief Registrar takes this opportunity of pointing out, that whilst no fee is payable on the registry of a Friendly Society, a Benevolent Society, a Working Men's Club, or a Cattle Insurance Society, or of a branch of any such body, body, a society registered under the Friendly Societies Acts has the following advantages over an unregistered society for the like purposes:—

1st. It can legally hold land and other kinds of property in the names of trustees, such property passing from one trustee to another (except in the case of stock in the the funds or copyholds) by the mere fact of their appointment, and can carry on all legal proceedings in the trustees' names.

2nd. Whilst the only criminal remedy against fraud by its members open to an unregistered society is confined to cases of larceny or embezzlement, a registered society has a remedy on summary conviction whenever any person—

- (1.) Obtains possession of any of its property by false representation or imposition;
- (2.) Having possession of any of its property, withholds or misapplies it;
- (3.) Wilfully applies any part of such property to purposes other than those expressed or directed by the rules, and authorised by the Act.

The penalty being a fine not exceeding 20 l. and costs, and in default of payment imprisonment, with or without hard labour, for not exceeding three months.

3rd. If an officer of the society dies or becomes bankrupt or insolvent, or if an execution is issued against him, whilst he has money or property of the society in his possession by virtue of his office, the trustees of the society are entitled to claim such money or property in preference to any other creditor.

4th. If the society has stock in the funds in the names of trustees, and a trustee is away from the United Kingdom, becomes bankrupt, &c., or a lunatic, dies or has been removed, or if it is unknown whether he is alive or dead, a registered society, instead of having to apply to the High Court of Justice, or to take any other proceedings which it would have to do if unregistered, can have the money transferred by direction of the Chief Registrar, on payment of 1 l. fee.

5th. The documents of the society are for the most part free from stamp duties.

6th. The society can admit members under 21 (but above 16) and take binding receipts from them, which would otherwise be of no effect.

7th. In a registered Friendly Society the certificates of birth or death of members, or of any other persons insured or to be insured with it, cost only 1 s.

8th. A registered society has the privilege of investing money with the National Debt Commissioners.

9th. It has certain special privileges in the holding of copyhold property.

10th. If it invests money on mortgage, such mortgages can be discharged by a mere endorsed receipt without reconveyance.

11th. Its officers are legally bound to render account and give up all money or property in their possession on demand or notice, and may be compelled to do so either by the County Court or the magistrates.

12th. Disputes may be legally settled according to the society's own rules (unless in the case of certain collecting societies), or if no decision is made within forty days after a decision is applied for, by the County Court or the magistrates, or if both parties desire it, and the rules do not forbid, by the Registrar of Friendly Societies.

13th. Members of registered Friendly Societies have the privilege of legally insuring money on the deaths of their wives and children, for their funeral funeral expenses, without having an insurable interest in their lives (such insurances are void by Act of Parliament, if effected with an unregistered society).

Report.

14th. Members of registered societies may (unless in benevolent societies or working men's clubs) dispose at death of sums payable by the society not exceeding 50 £., by written nomination, without a will; and this nomination may be made by youths of 16, who cannot make a will till they are 21.

15th. Where there is no will and no nomination, the trustees may distribute sums under 50 £. without letters of administration being taken out (a person who should do so in any other case would make himself liable for the debts of the deceased).

16th. The society is entitled, without being in anywise compelled so to do, to call in the services of the public auditors for the auditing of its accounts, and of the public valuers for the valuing of its assets and liabilities, at fixed rates of fees.

17th. Its rules, and other important documents relating to it, are placed on record in a public office, from whence authentic copies can be obtained, which are evidence in any court of justice. This is of great consequence in proving title to land, and in cases of prosecution by the society.

III. REGULATIONS FOR FRIENDLY SOCIETIES.

Some new and substituted Regulations and Forms under the Friendly Societies Act, dated 7th August 1876, and 12th February 1877, have been approved of by the Treasury. These have for their objects to facilitate procedure under the Act in the case of affiliated societies; to carry out the provisions of the Friendly Societies Amendment Act, 1876, as to notices of proceedings and orders to set aside dissolutions; to amend the previous regulations as to juvenile societies; to carry out more effectually the provisions of the Act of 1875 as to valuations; to establish a procedure (of which experience had shown the need) in respect of applications for dispensing with the consents and conditions prescribed by the Act for amalgamations and transfers of engagements, and to prescribe fees for certain investigations which may practically involve the making of a valuation.

A complete set of the Regulations now in force will be found in Appendix A. to this Report.

IV. SPECIAL AUTHORITIES.

The following purposes have been specially authorised by the Treasury, in addition to those mentioned or referred to in last year's Report:—

[20 March 1877.] "Assisting members out of employment."

[22 March 1877.] "Protecting and defending members of any lawful trade or calling against frivolous, vexatious, or malicious prosecutions, and, in cases of robbery or other crimes, affording them legal or other assistance for the detection and prosecution of the offenders."

[23 March 1877.] "Promoting agriculture or horticulture."

[Same date.] "Promoting temperance and economy by taking small deposits."

All the above-mentioned authorities are limited ones; and without specifying the exact limitations of each, it may be said generally that their effect is to confer the advantages of the Act without its special privileges, properly so called, such as exemption from stamp duties, priority against the estates of officers indebted to the society, &c.

The first of the four authorities of the present year, when its effect comes to be generally known, is likely to be widely beneficial. There are a large number of societies, both in the working class and amongst clerks and others in similar positions, which have for their object, with or without others, to maintain their members when out of employment, but which disclaim all idea of acting, within the the definition of a trade union, by "regulating the relations between workmen and masters, or between workmen and workmen," or by "imposing restrictive conditions on the conduct of any trade or business." The position of these bodies has hitherto been a most anomalous one. They have been shut out of the Friendly Societies Act by giving out of employment benefit; they have been shut out from the Trade Union Act, even under the wider definition of the Amendment Act of 1876, by not going so far as to regulate or restrain the conduct of a trade or business. They will now be able to obtain a legal status intermediate between that of a Friendly Society and a Trade Union, not receiving indeed the special privileges of the former, but obtaining various legal rights, such as that of a binding mode of settlement of disputes, involving the legal enforcement of benefits, the right of prosecution by individual members, with the authority of the central office, for fraud or misapplication of funds, the discharge of mortgages by receipt endorsed, &c., which are not open to Trade Unions.

The special authority of 16th May 1876 continues to be largely made use of by Loan Societies in Ireland, and in some instances in England also, two societies having been registered under it in the first six months of 1877, besides one in 1876. Since every society in England which applies for registry under it voluntarily foregoes the exceptional privileges of the Loan Societies Act, such as exemption from stamp duties, and enormously stringent remedies for the recovery of loans, as well as practical freedom from all responsibility for malpractices on the part of the society, it appears clear that the mere constitution of the Friendly Society, framed as it is on a basis of publicity and equal justice to the management and the members, offers some counterpoise to the almost fraudulent attractions of the Loan Societies Act.

V. THE ACTUARY.

The appointment, in pursuance of Section 10 (3) of the Friendly Societies Act, 1875, of an actuary to assist the central office, marks a very important step in the history of the Friendly Society system in this country. Although, in 1819, the 59 Geo. 3, c. 128, allowed friendly societies to be constituted for the maintenance or assistance of the contributors, &c., in any "natural state or contingency whereof the occurrence is susceptible of calculation by way of average," and words to this effect were repeated in subsequent Statutes till the Act of 1855 (18 & 19 Vict. c. 63); although the same Act of 1819 required the tables and rules of societies to be "approved by two persons at the least known to be professional actuaries, or persons skilled in calculation;" although the 9 & 10 Vict. c. 27, in 1846, required the tables of all new societies to be certified by an actuary; although the 13 & 14 Vict. c. 115, in 1850, confined to societies so certified the privilege of investment with the National Debt Commissioners; and although the requirement first enacted by the Act last referred to, that the tables of all societies granting certain annuities should be certified by an actuary, has continued in force until now, yet until the passing of the Act of 1875 no provision was made for attaching an actuary to the Registry Office. This is, indeed, explained by the circumstance that the office itself is only an outgrowth from the functions of the barrister appointed to certify the rules of savings banks by the National Debt Commissioners, to whose department such an officer was attached, so that the barrister, eventually termed registrar, and the actuary to the National Debt Office, were, in fact, colleagues in the same official service. It was therefore but natural that when the connection between the Registrar of Friendly Societies and the National Debt Office was legally severed by the Act of 1875, the need of actuarial assistance for the former should become more apparent than it had been, even had it not been rendered indispensable by the new provisions of the Act.

The following functions of an actuarial character are directly imposed upon the Registry Office, or upon the Chief Registrar by the Act of 1875:—

1. With the approval of the Treasury to collect, publish, and circulate information on the subject of the statistics of life and sickness, and the application thereof to the business of Friendly Societies, and also particulars as to valuations (Section 10, Sub-section 5 b).

Report.

2. With the like approval, to cause to be constructed and published tables for the payment of sums of money on death, in sickness, or old age, or on any other contingency forming the subject of an assurance authorised under the Act, which may appear to be calculable (Section 10, Sub-section 5 c).

3. To prepare an abstract of the quinquennial returns of sickness and mortality for laying before Parliament (Section 14, Sub-section 1 c).

4. To make investigation, and, if thought fit, award dissolution on an application made in due form, on the ground that the rates of contribution fixed in the rules of a society are insufficient to cover the benefits (Section 28, Sub-section 8, a and b).

5. To suspend discretionally a dissolution in the case last mentioned, if the Chief Registrar considers that certain alterations and adjustments of contributions and benefits may prevent the necessity of dissolving (Section 25, Sub-section 8 b).

Indirectly, the exercise of actuarial knowledge must also be implied in—

The making and registering or recording of observations on valuations, such as the Chief Registrar is authorised to make under Section 14 (6);

The dispensing with quinquennial returns and valuations as inapplicable to any given society (ibid);

And (probably) in certain cases of inspection under Section 23.

Lastly, the duty imposed upon the Registrar of accepting from societies the materials for valuation, and causing their assets and liabilities to be valued and reported on by an actuary requires that there should be a person or persons whose services the Registrar may be able to command for the purpose, or who may at least be able to advise him in the selection of a competent actuary outside the office.

Over and above these statutory functions, however, the actuary's assistance has been found extremely valuable in framing forms of returns, adapting them to particular groups of societies, giving advice to societies as to their forms of accounts, scrutinising the returns of particular societies, &c. He serves as the natural medium of communication between the Registry Office and the public valuers, and all letters bearing upon actuarial subjects are naturally referred to him. So valuable, indeed, is his help, and so well does it fit in with the work of the office that it would be a matter of wonder how it should ever have done without him, had it not been for the fortuitous circumstance that the Assistant Registrar for England had been himself trained originally for the actuarial profession, and had thus been able to supply aid in matters lying altogether beyond his statutory qualification as a barrister.

VI. PUBLIC AUDITORS.

The provisions of the Industrial and Provident Societies Act, 1876, as to the auditing of the accounts of societies and the appointment of public auditors being similar to those of the Friendly Societies Act, 1875, the appointments under the two Acts have been combined, and a consolidated set of conditions has been issued by the Treasury in substitution for those appended to the last Report, a copy of which will be found in Appendix B. to the present one. So far as respects Friendly Societies, the only substantial difference from the "conditions" of the previous year is, that public auditors are now restricted from auditing the accounts, balance-sheet, or annual return of any Society of which they are the accountants, or any account, balance-sheet, or annual return which they have themselves prepared. Although it would seem obvious that no one can with propriety audit accounts prepared by himself, experience has shown the necessity of this provision. All the public auditors appointed in 1876 have been re-appointed for 1877,* and some additions have been made to their number.

The number of Societies audited by public auditors during the year 1876 has not been large, but the Chief Registrar cannot doubt that their action has, on the whole, been extremely beneficial. From the Reports made to the Treasury, copies of which, or in some cases the originals, have been forwarded to this office, office, it appears that only 68 societies in all availed themselves of the services of the public auditors during the year 1876, of which, indeed, several months had elapsed before any appointments took place. This is not a matter for surprise, as the annual returns, which will probably afford the principal incentive to the calling in of the public auditors' services, were already beginning to come in when the public auditors were appointed, and were due in several counties before any appointments for those counties had taken place. It may be interesting to mention that the Warwickshire district was the one in which most societies applied to the public auditors (19 in all), and next to it the Dublin district (18). Only 3 applied in Lancashire, 1 in Middlesex, and none in Yorkshire, although these three counties are those containing the largest number of societies.

In some instances special reports of great ability have been forwarded with the annual returns; the Chief Registrar would especially notice one by Mr. Pierson, one of the auditors for Warwickshire. In a few instances, on the other hand, returns very imperfectly filled up were sent in under the signature of a public auditor.

Whilst the Chief Registrar cannot but hope that the number of societies resorting to the public auditors will go on increasing, he would observe that the services rendered by these officers are not to be measured by the mere number of societies audited by them. Their very existence must tend to improve all audits of societies by establishing a standard. The mere chance that a public auditor may be called in puts every auditor on his good behaviour.

Moreover, their services under the Acts need not be confined to auditing. Section 25 (8a) of the Friendly Societies Act, 1875, empowers the Chief Registrar, where an investigation is applied for with a view to dissolution, to carry on such investigation by a public auditor. And although this power has not yet been exercised, it has been found convenient, where an inspection has been applied for under Section 23 of the Act (as will presently be related), to appoint a public auditor for the purpose of making it.

In a certain number of instances the return of a society has been rendered void through the carelessness (to use the mildest term) of some gentleman practising as a public accountant, who has signed the same singly as a "public auditor," notwithstanding the provision of the Act, Section 14, 1 (c), printed at the foot of the Return itself, that the society shall submit its accounts for audit "either to one of the public auditors appointed as herein mentioned" (i. e., by the Treasury, under Section 35), "or to two or more persons appointed as the rules of the society provide," and that such auditors shall examine the annual return, and either sign it or specially report upon it. Where this has taken place, a letter has been addressed to the person signing the return, pointing out the impropriety of his doing so, and referring him to the penalties of the Act for making wilful entries in or omissions from returns, &c., with intent to evade any of the provisions of the Act. It is to be hoped that this warning will prove sufficient, and that gentlemen who wish to sign returns as public auditors will take the proper steps for qualifying themselves to do so.

VII. THE ANNUAL RETURNS.

The year 1876 was the first in which the attempt was made to obtain the annual returns of Societies under the Friendly Societies Acts, like those of Industrial and Provident Societies, Trades Unions, and Loan Societies, in a fixed form, instead of allowing the societies the option of sending in anything they pleased in the shape of a "copy of the last Annual Report," as was permitted by the 18 & 19 Vict. c. 63.

But although, at the foot of the return-form, which was sent out to every society, were printed the provisions of the Act relating to returns, showing that they must be made in a prescribed form, a large number of societies, amounting probably to over a thousand, sent in their annual reports instead, all of which had to be sent back.

The total number of returns received for England and Wales was 11,282; the total number of members, 3,404,187, and the total amount of funds, 9,336,948*.

Although

* The Chief Registrar regrets to have to state that the summaries of returns in Part II. of his Report for last year have been found to be incorrect, having been apparently drawn up from proofs which had not received the last corrections. The revised summaries, which will be found in Part II. of this Report, are those here referred to.

Report.

Although the number of returns falls short by over 100 of that for 1874, it must be remembered that, as pointed out above, it represents actual returns containing at least a minimum of specific information, and not mere reports as heretofore, which might mean anything or nothing. A considerably larger number, it is expected, will be received for 1876. Moreover, the number of members returned by 11,490 societies in 1875 was only 2,075,893, as against the 3,404,187 returned by 11,282 societies in 1876, thus showing that a first great step has been taken towards accuracy.

Some details gathered from the returns, as respects the number of members and amount of funds in individual societies, may not be uninteresting.

Twenty-two societies returned over 10,000 members each. Of these nine returned over 30,000, viz. :—

Royal Liver Friendly Society, Liverpool	-	-	-	682,371	Members.
United Assurance Society, Liverpool	-	-	-	159,957	"
Blackburn Philanthropic Burial Society, Blackburn	-	-	-	111,665	"
Royal London Friendly Society, London	-	-	-	94,103	"
*Hearts of Oak Benefit Society, London	-	-	-	64,421	"
Liverpool Protective Burial Society, Liverpool	-	-	-	54,065	"
Loyal Philanthropic Friendly Society, Liverpool	-	-	-	43,000	"
Burslem Mutual Burial Society, Burslem	-	-	-	40,867	"
*Rational Sick and Burial Association, Manchester	-	-	-	32,387	"

With the exception of the two marked with an asterisk in the list, all the above-named societies belong to the class of collecting burial societies, and their membership is known to consist very largely of infants. Out of the nine six have their head-quarters in Lancashire, and four of these (all burial societies) in Liverpool; two (one a burial society) in London. The aggregate membership of the whole 22 societies amounts to 1,478,765, or not far from one-half of the total returned, leaving 1,925,422 members in all the 11,260 other societies with less than 10,000 members making returns, or an average of close upon 171 members each. From this will be seen how small the bulk of our Friendly Societies really are in point of membership.

If we turn to the amount of funds and adopt the same figures, we shall find very different results. Fifty-eight societies return more than 10,000*l.* each, or together 2,283,346 l., representing not much more than a quarter of the total, and leaving 7,053,602 l. for the remaining 11,224 societies, or say 628 l. nearly each. Of these 58 the 18 following return over 30,000 l., viz. :—

Royal Liver Friendly Society, Liverpool	453,418
*Hearts of Oak Benefit Society, London	179,995
Liverpool Victoria Legal Friendly Society, Liverpool	123,035
*Royal Standard Benefit Society, London	100,729
*Mutual Provident Alliance, London, S.E.	83,741
*Society for the Benefit of the Widows and Orphans of the Hospital and Regimental Staff of Her Majesty's Army, London, S.E.	79,719
*Essex Provident Society, Chelmsford	77,845
*Cannon Street Male Adult Provident Institution, Birmingham	66,780
*Western Provident Institution, Exeter	65,557
*Rational Sick and Burial Association, Manchester	55,555
*Hampshire Friendly Society, Winchester	53,730
*Western Annuity Society, Exeter	48,160
*Stoke and Melford Union Association, Stoke-by-Nayland	41,137
*London Dock Friendly Institution, London	40,654
*Birmingham General Provident and Benevolent Institution, Birmingham	37,997
*Widow and Orphans' Fund, Brighton	36,657
*Brighton and Sussex Mutual Provident Society, Brighton	35,752
United Assurance Society, Liverpool	31,218

Here it will be seen that the asterisks denoting societies other than collecting burial societies altogether predominate. Except that the Royal Liver heads both lists, that the United Assurance fills the last place instead of the second, and that the Liverpool Victoria Legal, which did not return the number of its members, but which, had it done so, no doubt should have been in the former list, now stands third, this class of societies has disappeared from the list. Lancashire is now but poorly represented, by four societies out of 22 (three of them burial societies). London is represented by five societies; Birmingham, Brighton, and Exeter, each by two.

If we attempted from the above data to estimate the membership and funds of the 14,805 societies which have failed to make returns, it would be very unsafe to take either the average of membership or funds of the societies with less than 10,000 members or 10,000*l.* funds as a basis. The great bulk of the larger societies, and especially of the richer ones, having probably made returns, it would hardly be prudent to suppose an average of more than 65 members, with 30*s.* funds a head, or say, in round numbers, 98*l.* This would give an addition of 962,325 members, making in all 4,366,512 members, and of 1,450,890 l. funds, making in all 10,787,839 l. A deduction must, however, be made from the membership for persons who are members of two or more societies at once, as of several burial societies, or of a burial society and an affiliated order, or of two affiliated orders, or of an affiliated order and a dividing society. Perhaps 10 per cent. might be deducted on this amount, leaving still over 3,900,000 members.

Since the above figures apply only to registered societies, it appears probable that the estimate given some years since by the Friendly Societies Commissioners* of over four millions of persons members of Friendly Societies registered and unregistered, with 11,000,000 l. funds, was decidedly under the mark.

In a few cases in which, after notice, societies persisted in not filling up the form, prosecutions were instituted, and in every case except one, in which there had been a mistake as to the name and the summons was withdrawn (an unregistered society, for a somewhat different purpose, having been mistaken for an extinct registered society of the same name), penalties were recovered. The societies prosecuted with success consisted of a lodge of the Manchester Unity, a Court of Foresters, a local town society, and one of the largest collecting burial societies.

The requirement, moreover, of returns in a specified form involved for the first time an individual examination of each return received, to see if it complied with the prescriptions of the law. This task, however, proved one which the resources of the office, although augmented by the services of two additional writers, proved inadequate to fulfil. The returns were found to be so imperfectly filled up that it was impossible to reduce them to any satisfactory degree of correctness. Of those received, even after many of them had been sent back for correction, less than two-thirds, probably, are in proper form. In a vast number of cases no attempt was made to fill up the inner pages of the sheet, containing the amounts of receipts and payments for benefits and management, but only the front page, stating the names of trustees, number of members, &c. In some instances it is candidly stated that the accounts have not been audited. In hundreds and hundreds of cases again, notwithstanding the printing at the foot of the return of the provisions of the Statute, requiring the signature either of one public auditor, or of two auditors appointed according to the rules, the return has been sent in without any auditors' names, or without any auditors' signatures, or else signed by a single person as auditor.† In one case a clergyman, sole auditor to a society without treasurer or trustees, sent in a return, including a balance-sheet, only filled up as respects the assets, and with a note written on it showing that he had not the most remote conception of what a friendly society's balance-sheet meant.

The result has been that whilst the issue of the statistical portion of the Chief Registrar's Report for last year was delayed far beyond the usual period, he is sorry to say that it was published in a shape far from satisfactory to him. It was sought, for the first time, to print a complete list of the societies, which would have shown at one glance the societies which had or had not made their returns, but this could only be carried out as far as the returns for Lancashire included. The blanks in pp. 157-358 of Part II. of his last Report will give evidence of the vast number of societies which have not, so to speak, begun to fulfil their statutory obligations in this matter; but they convey no idea of the imperfection of the actual returns themselves. One column, it will be seen, that intended to show the amount of funds per member, was after a time left blank, as it appeared on examination that the figures given were seldom to be depended on.

The

Report.

The Chief Registrar is convinced that until proper accounts are kept by Friendly Societies, and can be tested by the proper filling up of returns, no sensible progress can be made in their management. He hopes, therefore, that he will be enabled for the next few years to make this his main object. The conditions for so doing, it appears to him, are three. First, the liberal diffusion of information on the subject; second, a sufficient staff at the Registry Office to carry out fully the work of examination, and of correspondence with the societies for the amendment of their returns; third, the systematic prosecution of societies which refuse or do not care to fulfil the requirements of the law.

The importance from the point of view of a true social science of the regular publication of really accurate figures as to the growth of Friendly Societies can hardly be exaggerated. No others can afford so good a test of the progress of the working class in material prosperity, as well as in provident habits. But so long as the number of returns received amounts only to a little more or a little less than half of the total number of societies, as has hitherto been the case, all general inferences drawn from their results must be utterly fallacious.

Complaints have been made (the Chief Registrar understands they always have been made) of the complexity of the forms issued. The large number of cases in which these forms have been intelligently filled up, even in societies composed of persons in the humbler ranks of life, is sufficient to show that they are by no means above the comprehension of ordinary working men.* For the present year, however, the Chief Registrar has taken several steps towards further simplifying them. Thus: instead of sending on the same sheet forms for ordinary Friendly Societies, for collecting societies within Section 30 of the Act, and for societies requiring only a cash account and balance-sheet, as working men's clubs, &c. (which has no doubt proved confusing in some cases), separate forms have been issued to the three classes. Again: it having been surmised that one reason why so many Friendly Societies failed to send in returns was that no form hitherto issued was specially adapted to societies of the simplest type, where one contribution covers all benefits, an optional form has been framed for these.

With respect to the affiliated orders again, a course has been adopted which it is hoped will facilitate the making of their branch returns, though at some sacrifice of uniformity.

The 56th Regulation, as now in force, requires that "the annual and quinquennial returns of a society with branches shall include all branches of the society registered under the Act."

With a view to the better carrying out of this regulation, a letter was in the first instance addressed to the secretaries of the principal orders, requesting them to forward to the office copies of the returns now received by them from their lodges or courts. This request was pretty generally complied with, but on examination it appeared that the returns thus received varied so much as to render it virtually impossible to draw up a single form which should be applicable to all branches of orders.

Under these circumstances, the best course appeared to be to draw up a model form, which the Chief Registrar believes will be found applicable in the majority of cases, and capable of all necessary modifications to suit special circumstances, but the use of which is not imperative, so long as the order, using its own forms, sets forth in its branch returns certain particulars, viz.:—

For a district branch :

1. The names of the subordinate branches in the district.
2. The funds of the district under the control of the district.
3. The funds of the district under the control of the order.
4. All receipts and expenditure of the district for the year, describing fully the items.
5. The receipts and expenditure for the year of each fund which is kept separate.
6. The receipts and expenditure of the management fund separately.
7. The sickness payments, distinguishing between those made to subordinate branches (if

(if any) and those made to members, and distinguishing between payments on account of full sick allowance and those on account of reduced sick allowance.

8. The death payments, distinguishing between payments to subordinate branches and payments on death of members, their wives or widows.

9. The whole of the assets and liabilities of the district, the securities upon which its funds are invested, and the rate of interest they respectively yield.

10. The number of district members at the beginning of the year, the number who died during the year, the number who left from other causes, and the number at the end of the year.

For a branch other than a district branch :—

1. The name of the district branch (if any) with which the branch is in connexion.

2. The funds of the branch under the control of the branch.

3. The funds of the branch under the control of the district or order.

4. All receipts and expenditure of the branch for the year, describing fully the items.

5. The receipts and expenditure for the year of each fund which is kept separate.

6. The receipts and expenditure of the management fund separately.

7. The sickness payments, distinguishing between payments made to the district (if any) and those to members, and distinguishing between payments on account of full sick allowance and those on account of reduced and further reduced sick allowance (if any).

8. The death payments, distinguishing between payments to the district and payments on death of members, their wives or widows.

9. The whole of the assets and liabilities of the branch, the securities upon which they are invested, and the rate of interest they respectively yield.

10. The number of benefit members at the beginning of the year, the number who died during the year, the number who left from other causes, and the number at the end of the year.

The affiliated orders are thus left free, on certain conditions, to frame their own branch returns. It need hardly be observed that this latitude only extends to branches registered as such under the new Acts, and not to such as remain separately registered as societies. These will have to send in the ordinary returns for societies, as the orders themselves will have to do, in respect of funds under the control of the central body.

Finally, letters have been addressed to a large number of the societies, which sent in last year imperfectly audited returns, stating the fact, and warning them of the penalties incurred by transgression of the provisions of the Act as to the auditing of accounts and returns.

It is satisfactory to be able to add that the returns for the year 1876 which have come in hitherto, are generally more complete and correct than those of the previous year, and that owing to improved arrangements in matters of detail, they are being subjected to a more timely and careful examination than the former ones, under the superintendence of the Chief Clerk, who (with the occasional assistance of the Actuary) has charge of this branch of the work of the office, with the exception of the balance sheets of building societies, which are examined by the Assistant Registrar.

VIII. THE QUINQUENNIAL RETURNS OF SICKNESS AND MORTALITY.

The forms for Quinquennial Returns for the period 1871-75 were issued in 1876, and the total number of returns received for the three kingdoms is 10,008. This is the largest number that appears to have been ever received. The totals for England and Wales were 7,706 in 1865, and 7,467 in 1870, thus showing an increase (allowing for Scotland and Ireland) of over 2,000, in round numbers, over 1870, when the number fell short of that in 1865. As the Quinquennial Return has always been made on a specific form, this increase indicates a real progress in the efficient carrying out of the law. It is true to say that out of the 10,008 returns, a large number will be found to be practically of very little value, in consequence of being imperfectly or incorrectly drawn up. It was scarcely to be expected that it would be otherwise, and it may be added that very few indeed of the returns from societies having more than 1,000 members, purporting to be drawn up on the principle recommended by the Actuarial

Report.

Commission, of grouping the members according to years of birth, can be said to be trustworthy; indeed, the greater portion are prima facie inaccurate. In the case of those large societies, who have furnished apparently correct returns in this form, it has transpired that professional assistance has generally been found necessary before the Act could be complied with. Another point calling for notice in reference to this class of returns is, that no information can be gathered from them as to the occupations of the members.

As regards the ordinary form of return, the most common error appears to have been to put down particulars of those only who had died or received sick pay in the five years, although express instructions to the contrary were put at the top of the sheets, viz.: "List of all the members and other persons who have been assured for sick pay during the five years, whether they have been sick or not, and where they have been sick, the duration of sickness experienced by each." Another common error was found to be the insertion in the return of particulars of those members only who had joined the society in the five years, no particulars of the existing members who had joined previous to that date being furnished. Many returns are imperfect on account of the members' ages not being given, and this remark applies specially to that class of societies having the same rate of contribution for all persons entering between the limiting ages prescribed by the rules.

The particulars relating to the wives and children of members are, as a rule, very imperfect, the reason being apparently that members do not give, nor do the societies themselves insist upon their members giving the necessary information until circumstances call for it, and this is generally when a claim on account of benefits is made upon the funds of the society.

A point that will require careful consideration when dealing with the particulars of the sickness, is the varying practice of societies as to the payment of sickness allowance for terms of less than a complete week, some societies counting seven days to the week and others only counting six.

One of the most important matters as to which information is required, is the duration of attacks of sickness, because in nearly all societies the full sickness allowance only lasts for a certain length of time, and then in the event of the member being still sick, the amount of the sickness allowance is reduced, and it becomes therefore desirable in making a valuation of a society's assets and liabilities, that the valuer should be in a position to make an estimate, not only of the number of weeks' sickness that may be expected per member on the average, but also of the effect of such sickness upon the society's financial position. Whether the present quinquennial returns will furnish any trustworthy information on this point cannot be stated until they have been submitted to a very careful examination.

On the whole, it may be said that the requirements as to quinquennial returns have been very fairly complied with. A considerable number of societies have made really excellent returns, in the compilation of which the officers of such societies must have spent much time and trouble, and in the returns made by the great majority of the societies there seems to have been a conscientious endeavour to fill up the forms with accuracy; the failures, although frequent, arising apparently from want of knowledge of what was required, or from the society's books not furnishing the information. There is no doubt that to this last-mentioned cause, namely, a defective method of accounts, may be attributed many of the acknowledged evils in the existing Friendly Societies, and a great improvement in this respect must precede most of the other reforms in themselves so desirable.

In the following tables, the societies making quinquennial returns have been classified according to counties, and according to the nature of the benefits granted, namely:—

- (A.) Societies granting sick benefit.
- (B.) Societies granting only assurances on death.
- (C.) Societies granting only annuities, either deferred or immediate.

This last classification, however, for various reasons, cannot be considered completely trustworthy.

Report.

IX. VALUATIONS: THE PUBLIC VALUERS.

Among the various actuarial questions involved in the working of the new Act, those of most immediate importance have reference to valuations, and to the appointment of public valuers.

By Section 14 (6) of the Friendly Societies Act, 1875, a valuation once at least in every five years of assets and liabilities is rendered obligatory on all registered Friendly Societies, unless dispensed with by the Chief Registrar, with the approval of the Treasury, as being inapplicable to the purposes or to the operations of the Society (Section 14, Sub-section 6, proviso).

This valuation may be effected in two ways:—

1. The society may appoint its own valuer, and send to the Registrar a report signed by him, and stating his address and calling or profession, on the condition of the society, and an abstract made by him of the results of his valuation, with a return containing such information as to the benefits assured and contributions receivable by the society, and of its funds and effects, debts and credits, as the Registrar requires.

2. Or it may have its valuation made through the Registry Office by sending to the Registrar a return of the benefits assured and contributions receivable from all its members, and of all its funds and effects, debts and credits, accompanied by such evidence in support thereof as the Chief Registrar prescribes. In this case the Registrar has to cause the assets and liabilities of the society to be valued and reported on by some actuary, and sends to the society a copy of his report, and an abstract of the results of his valuation.

In either case the provision of Section 14, Sub-section 5, applies, that “any annual, quinquennial, or other return, abstract of valuation and other document required for the purposes of this Act shall be made in such form and shall contain such particulars as the Chief Registrar prescribes.”

To facilitate the performance of societies' duties in respect to valuation, it is provided that the Treasury may appoint public valuers, and may determine the rates of remuneration to be paid by societies for their services, but their employment is not compulsory on any society (Section 35).

In fulfilment of this provision the Treasury has appointed public valuers under the Friendly Societies Acts, and has issued instructions to them, a copy of which, with the list of valuers, will be found in Appendix (C.) to this Report.

These instructions, although addressed specifically to public valuers, are in fact capable of serving as a guide to all valuers, and the Chief Registrar has forwarded a copy of them to the secretaries of all the principal orders with that view.

In connection with these instructions the substituted Regulation 56, and the new Regulations, 70 to 72, should be considered. By the former, provision is made for the valuation of a society with branches, which is to include all funds under the control of the central body of the society, whilst a registered branch, in respect of the valuation of any fund or funds administered by itself, or by a committee or officers appointed by itself, is placed on the same footing as a separate society.

Regulation 70, which it must be observed applies to all valuations, whether by public valuers or others, provides that no valuation is to be deemed to be one under the Act where the valuer has audited the accounts of the society or branch for the year next preceding the valuation, the object being to insure at least one year's independent audit before a valuation.

Regulations 71 and 72 provide for the fees payable on valuations, when made through the Registry Office. These, it should be observed, are fixed at a much higher rate than the scale for valuations by public valuers. Thus the fee for the valuation by a public valuer of a society consisting of not more than 50 members would only be 3 l. 3 s.; that for a society of not more than 100 members, 4 l. 4 s.; that of one of not more than 150 (within the prescribed limits as to benefits) 5 l. 5 s.; the fee for a valuation through the office of a society of not more than 150 members would be 10 l.

It is not desirable, still less is it practicable, that the valuing of societies should be centralized in the Registry Office. It would not be proper, on the other hand, when gentlemen of as high character as those appointed to be public valuers have bound themselves to accept valuations at a scale of fees much lower than those which are frequently asked and received, that the office should appear to step in as a competitor with them; nor finally is it expedient that the time of the actuary to the Central Office should be taken up with matters of mere practice, or that the Government should assume largely the responsibility towards particular societies which would be thrown upon it by undertaking to value them.

The public valuers, it is understood, have formed themselves into a committee, and have taken steps towards establishing an agreement among themselves on certain points which the instructions do not deal with.

Forms of valuation for cases in which the society appoints its own valuer have been drawn up by the actuary to the Central Office, and will be found in Appendix (D.) They consist of:—

(1.) The return with respect to the benefits assured and contributions receivable by the society, and of its funds, and effects, debts and credits.

(2.) The abstract to be made by the valuer of the results of his valuation.

No form has been fixed for the report signed by the valuer on the condition of the society. The two foregoing forms should be applied for when required.

In connexion with this part of the subject, it is due to the memory of a remarkable man to record the serious loss experienced by Friendly Societies in the death of Mr. Henry Ratcliffe, secretary of the Manchester Unity of Odd Fellows, occurring as it did only a few months after the official recognition of his merits as an actuary, through his appointment as a public valuer under the Friendly Societies Acts. A self-taught man, Mr. Ratcliffe's name will be remembered not only through the tables of sickness and mortality known as Ratcliffe's tables, founded on the experience of the Manchester Unity (which tables, as noticed in the Report for last year, were adopted by the Actuarial Commissioners as the basis for the tables of rates of contribution recommended by them for temporary use, and which have also been recognised in the "Instructions to Public Valuers"*) but through the valuation of the Manchester Unity as a whole, as at 1st January 1871, the largest work of the kind ever carried out. Mr. Ratcliffe, at the time of his death, was engaged on a second valuation of his order, as at 1st January 1876, which is thus unfortunately left unfinished by him.† It may be safely said that no man had ever so large an experience in the valuing of Friendly Societies, or contributed so much to the practical diffusion amongst them of the elements of actuarial knowledge, as Mr. Ratcliffe, and the confidence which was reposed in him was so widely diffused that his place cannot for years be filled up. His example, on the other hand, shows that there is no reason why Friendly Societies should be compelled to have recourse to the skill of gentlemen occupied in other fields of actuarial science, but that their own is amply sufficient as a training ground, if, in addition to a profitable use of the ordinary means of education, those habits of careful calculation and accurate observation are cultivated, which are the foundation of actuarial merit.

The Chief Registrar is glad to be able to call attention to steps which are being taken in more than one county to promote the valuation of societies.

In the county of Montgomery a committee was formed some time since with the then Lord Lieutenant (Lord Sudeley) as chairman; the Earl of Powis, Sir W. Williams Wynn, Bart., M.P.; Hon. C. R. D. Hanbury-Tracy, M.P. (now Lord Sudeley); C. W. W. Wynn, Esq., M.P., and David Davies, Esq., M.P., as vice-chairmen; and A. C. Humphreys-Owen, Esq., as honorary secretary; and a sub-committee of management was appointed chosen from the members subscribing not less than 1*l.* 1*s.* per annum, or making a donation of not less 5*l.* 5*s.* According to the rules of the committee, the sub-committee has power—

(1.) To

* See Appendix (C).

† He is understood to have completed the valuations county by county, in alphabetical order, as far as Staffordshire, on which he was occupied.

Report.

(1.) To pay or contribute to the expenses of valuation of any Friendly Society by an actuary approved by the sub-committee.

(2.) To publish information as to the objects and work of the committee, and as to the rights and duties of Friendly Societies under the present law.

(3.) To recommend for local assistance any new Friendly Society or medical club whose rules have been approved by the sub-committee, or any Friendly Society which shall have been valued by, and adopted the recommendations of, some actuary approved by the sub-committee.

The sub-committee have issued a circular, of which the following is a copy :—

MONTGOMERYSHIRE FRIENDLY SOCIETIES AID COMMITTEE.

The sub-committee desire to call the attention of benefit clubs within the county to the following extracts from the Friendly Societies Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 60):—

“Every registered society shall, once at least in the five years next after the commencement of this Act, or the registry of the society, and so again within six months after the expiration of every five years succeeding the date of the first valuation under this Act, either cause its assets and liabilities to be valued by a valuer, to be appointed by the society, and send to the Registrar a report signed by such valuer (and which shall also state his address and calling, or profession), on the condition of the society, and an abstract (to be made by him) of the results of his valuation, together with a return containing such information with respect to the benefits assured, and contributions receivable, by the society, and of its funds and effects, debts and credits, as the Registrar may from time to time require”; or, “send to the Registrar a return of the benefits assured, and contributions receivable, from all the members of the society, and of all its funds and effects, debts and credits, accompanied by such evidence in support thereof as the Chief Registrar prescribes, in which case the Registrar shall cause the assets and liabilities of the society to be valued and reported on by some actuary, and shall send to the society a copy of his report, and an abstract of the results of his valuation.”

Parliament has required this valuation to be made in order that, at least once in five years, every club may be told, on the best authority, whether it is going on safely or not. Most people have known instances of clubs which, though universally believed to be sound and prosperous, have turned out to be quite unable to fulfil their promises. Clubs may be overtaken by such disasters in consequence either of being mismanaged or of having promised more than they could perform. In either case, examination by an actuary of the state of the club will at once detect the mischief which can then be remedied before it has gone too far. All insurance offices, and very many benefit clubs, invariably have themselves thus examined or valued once every five years; and the Manchester Unity of Oddfellows, though they have not hitherto required periodical valuations of their lodges, have always encouraged the practice, and are now, for the second time, having a valuation made of every lodge in the Unity.

In the interests, therefore, of the benefit clubs of the county, the committee strongly urge upon them that the provisions of the Act of Parliament above quoted should be carried out as speedily and effectually as possible. For this purpose the committee will be ready to consider any applications by clubs in the county for donations in aid of payment of the expenses of valuations by an actuary approved by the sub-committee, and to give any information in their power on the subject.

The committee, however, especially wish to assure the members of the clubs to whom this circular is sent, that they have no intention whatever of interference or dictation. Their sole object is to aid the clubs of the county in furnishing themselves with a safeguard, which experience has already shown to be most necessary, and which is now absolutely required by law.

It is requested that this circular may be brought before the members of the club on the earliest possible occasion.

Communications to be addressed to A. C. Humphreys-Owen, Glansevern, Garthmyl, Montgomeryshire, from whom any further information can be obtained.

As a result of this movement, it may be stated that already the committee have been able to assist four societies in obtaining the services of a public valuer, and in defraying the necessary expenses of a valuation.

In the county of Bedford a committee appointed for a very different purpose have come practically to the conclusion of recommending a course similar to that just described as in course of operation in Montgomeryshire.

A committee was appointed on 20th March 1875, to inquire into the subject of Friendly Societies in the county of Bedford, which has issued a report signed by by the following gentlemen, viz.: Messrs. William Stuart, Sam. Whitbread, W. B. Higgins, C. Magniac, W. Francis Higgins, Charles Howard, Henry A. Bottle, E. Crouch, and F. Seeborn.

The main object the committee had in view appears to have been to ascertain whether if any new Friendly Society for the county were established, the existing village clubs could be absorbed into the new society on such terms as would enable their members to secure in the new society the benefits which they had anticipated in the old clubs. Accordingly detailed information was sought concerning the existing village clubs, and an actuary was employed to assist the committee. As the result of their investigations, it was found that for six clubs alone, of varying sizes, in different parts of the county, and founded at different dates, the County Society would require, upon taking them over, a single payment of more than 17,000 l., whereas the available assets of the six clubs amounted to 6,296 l. only. The committee, however, state that "It should be understood that this valuation is not a valuation of the actual assets and liabilities of these clubs, or their means of fulfilling the promises held out by their own rules." The committee have at the same time little or no doubt that the contributions to the existing village clubs are too low to secure the benefits promised. Finding themselves unable to suggest a scheme by which the village clubs could be safely taken over by a county society, they next considered whether it was desirable on other grounds to attempt to form a new benefit society for the county. After carefully examining the question, they were of opinion that it was not desirable to recommend such a course for the following reasons, among others:—

"A. The disadvantages inherent in any form of patronised Friendly Society, viz., a society where the management is almost necessarily in the hands of one class, whilst the benefits are intended for another class.

"Some of these disadvantages are referred to in the Report of the Royal Commission on Friendly Societies, e. g.,

"The want of interest in the affairs of the society on the part of members.

"The absence of any sufficient voice in the management of its affairs, or of any strong feeling amongst the members against imposition, and, as a consequence, the high sickness rate.

"The disposition to regard the amount of the accumulated insurance fund as unnecessarily large.

"B. That the ordinary Friendly Society has this great defect, that it forms to the member a strong tie binding him to the locality where only he can draw the benefits for which he has subscribed; whereas the club which would enable the labourer to draw sick pay in case of removal to a distance, would confer great benefit upon him.

"C. That any form of Friendly Society on a sound basis which would give to the members themselves the management of its affairs, would have greater inherent vitality, and would do more to educate them in the principles and practice of thrift than any patronised society, however strongly supported.

"D. That the spread of education amongst the rural population increases the capacity for forming and managing such a society, if once they are convinced of the necessity for it.

"E. That if ever the great affiliated societies should penetrate into the agricultural districts, all experience goes to show that they would drive out any other society. So that whilst a new county society might for a time prevail over the existing village clubs, and absorb some of them, there is no security that in its turn it would not be destroyed by the affiliated societies."

After some remarks upon the Manchester Unity Order of Oddfellows, the committee notice in some detail "two other plans which have been started for husbanding the resources of our working population, namely, the Deposit Societies and the Post Office Savings' Banks."

The main results arrived at are thus expressed:—

"1. We think it should be clearly understood that the real object of Friendly Societies (whether the ordinary benefit club or the affiliated societies) is rather an assurance against sickness than a sufficient provision for old age. It should never be forgotten that the ordinary contribution to a club would have to be materially raised if a full provision for old age is to be secured, and any expectation that by smaller payments the same benefits can be provided, must in the long run prove delusive.

"2. It follows that, belonging to a benefit club should not be looked upon as a substitute for saving in the ordinary way.

"3. We are unable to recommend that a new County Friendly Society should be established.

Report.

"blished. It seems to us that it would not meet the needs of the agricultural labourers of this county as regards provision against sickness so well as would be done by branches of the best affiliated orders.

* * * * *

"One great obstacle in the way of reform in any village club is, that whenever any of the more prudent of the young members question the soundness of the society, they are met with the reply that the club has lasted for a long time, and that a valuation by a competent actuary is an expensive affair. This objection can be met.

"We recommend—

"Firstly. That a county committee be appointed for the purpose of disseminating information and giving advice to either clubs or individuals who may require it in connection with any or all of the several forms of provident institutions.

"Secondly. That a fund of moderate size be raised, so as to enable the committee to secure the best professional advice, and in this connection we have particularly in view the desirability of affording to every village club the means of ascertaining its true position by a valuation, by a competent actuary, free of cost."

X.—VALUATION RETURNS RECEIVED.

In compliance with Section 10 (6) of the Friendly Societies Act, 1875, the Chief Registrar proceeds to give particulars of the valuations referred to, or caused to be made, by the Registrar in 1876.

Eight societies have complied with the Act by making returns in the required form of valuations of their assets and liabilities. A number of other societies also sent in particulars of valuations made, but as the same were not in such form as to comply with the Act, they had to be returned for correction. One society, the Stevenage Provident Society, as will be seen further on, tendered a valuation, which was not accepted.

It will be noticed that six of the eight valuations have been made by two professional actuaries; the other two by a schoolmaster and accountant respectively.

It will be seen, on reference to the valuations, that there is something more required of a competent valuer than mere computing by the aid of tables. The special features of the society must be carefully considered from various points of view before the principles and data to be used in the valuation can be properly determined upon. Among the many points to be regarded are the following:

(1.) The nature of the society's investments, and the rate of interest they yield.

(2.) The nature of the society's sickness and mortality experience.

(3.) The financial effect of reducing the sick pay in cases of prolonged sickness.

(4.) The financial effect of sickness allowance throughout life.

(5.) The number of members in the society; that is, whether the number is large enough to justify the expectation of average results.

Again, when the principles and data to be used have been carefully chosen, and the results of the valuation ascertained, there arise other important questions as to which the valuer ought to be able to give the society information, advice, and assistance. The valuer should be competent, for instance,—

1. To give a satisfactory explanation of the cause of the surplus or deficiency shown by the valuation.

2. To advise as to how such surplus or deficiency should be dealt with.

3. To fix the principles on which such surplus should be divided, or such deficiency made good.

See below.

* The figures given under this head sometimes apply only to the date of registry, the date of establishment not being ascertainable.

The expenses of management are stated to be met by the entrance fees, honorary subscriptions, and a charge of 1 s. per annum from each member. Of the 140 members, only seven were assured for sick allowances up to age 65, the remainder being assured for sick allowance throughout life. It appears from the valuer's report that "the sick pay has been greatly in excess of the general expectation compared with the numbers of members," in other words, "the average number of members" "is four times as much as might have been expected, six members alone having had sick allowances for the whole of the five years, namely, 313 weeks each." The report then proceeds: "This is an unusual amount of sickness, and although in many cases it might more properly be called infirmity or inability to work, it is a difficult matter to decide where sickness ends, and infirmity or inability to work begins."

Notwithstanding these remarks, the valuer states that the valuation is made "on the same principles and by the same tables as used in 1865 and 1870"; but it appeared on inquiry that the valuer could not state what rate of interest and what rates of mortality and sickness had been used by the late Mr. Samuel Brown, who had made the previous valuations, as, in reply to direct questions on this point, he states, "Having computed the value of the future monthly contributions, and the present value of sickness, benefits, and sums at death, from tables for that purpose in a pamphlet, 'Instructions for the Establishment of Friendly Societies, and Forms of Rules and Tables applicable thereto,' received from the late Tidd Pratt, Esq., and also from the calculations by S. Brown, Esq., in 1865 and 1870, I was able to make a correct valuation without the aid of tables of sickness and mortality, which were neither required nor used in any way." It will be seen, therefore, that, although the valuer is alive to the financial importance of the society's sickness experience in the past, he is unable to explain what assumptions have been made in his valuation as to its nature and amount in the future. Mr. Yates was paid by the society a fee of 5*l.* 5*s.* for his valuation, which is the amount a public valuer would be authorised to charge in a similar case.

To the fund for management expenses is apportioned the first six months' contribution of members assured for sickness and sums at death, as well as all the fines incurred, and honorary subscriptions received.

The special feature of this society is that "there is no reduction of the amount of benefit through continued sickness."

The investigation made into the society's sickness experience gave the following results:—

YEARS.	Number of Members.	Number of Attacks.	Average Weeks' Sickness per Annum.
			By Member (whether Sick or not).	Per Member Sick.
1861-65	2,579	694	1,457	5,415

1871-75	3,555	1,311	1,235	5,321

The valuer in his report called attention to the variation in the sickness experience of one district of the society, as compared with another district, "strongly recommending the greatest attention" "to this point, as the exceptional position of the society in never making any reduction in the sickness pay, no matter how protracted the illness," renders it "essentially requisite that a stringent supervision should be maintained." At the preceding valuation, as at 31st December 1870, a bonus was declared in the form of an annual cash payment for the five years next ensuing, calculated as a certain percentage on the members' contributions; and a portion of the surplus shown by the present valuation appears to have been appropriated in a similar way. It appears that females may become members, but no reference is made to this point in the valuer's report. In the 29th annual report to the members, it is stated that, "Of the society's capital, 16,380*l.* remains invested on good mortgage securities, carrying interest at the rate of 5 per cent."

"English Friendly Societies "Experience," (North Staffordshire Provident Valuation).

The management expenses are met by a separate monthly contribution from the members. From the valuer's report, it appears that the benefit contributions are the same for all ages at entry, viz., 1 s. 5 d. per calendar month, which assures 6 l. at death, 2 l. of which amount is payable on death of members' wife if she dies first, and as regards sickness,—
Full pay of 10 s. for 6 months.
Half-pay of 5 s.

The report goes on to state: "To show the full effect of the rule regulating the reduction of the sickness allowance in protracted sickness, it may be mentioned that were no such regulation in force, the society's liabilities under its sickness contracts would be 4,891 l. 7 s., in lieu of 3,070 l. 4 s. 2 d."

As regards the deficiency of 449 l. 9 s. 8 d. brought out as the result of the valuation, the valuer says:—
"It must be borne in mind that quite recently (November 1874) you appear to have increased the sickness benefit from 9 s. to 10 s. a week, and moreover extended the periods for full and half pay from three to six months respectively. This alteration of itself would nearly suffice to account for the above deficiency. Then also I gather from your annual reports that though the mortality in the last decennium has been but normal, the same cannot be said of the sickness' experience. This is undoubtedly high, and the fault will be found I apprehend in the duration of the sickness amongst those sick and not in the number of the attacks; and though last not least, the rates of subscription have had some effect in producing this deficit, as every member entering above 20 must have entailed a loss on the society."

With respect to the practice of charging uniform contributions for all ages at entry, the valuer says:—
"I would draw your attention to the unfairness of maintaining for entrance one uniform subscription from ages 15 to 31. As an exemplification, I may mention, that for the death benefit only, the risk at 31 entails a liability nearly 50 per cent. greater than at age 15."

It will be seen that whereas the society only makes 2 57 per cent. interest on its funds in the valuation, it has been assumed that the rate realised will be 3 per cent., and the valuer suggests an alteration in the investment policy of the society as follows:—
"The Post Office Savings Bank is not the proper place for the funds of a Friendly Society, and the funds have been none the more secure than they would have been if realising a considerably higher rate of interest. With the ample scope for investment under the Friendly Societies Act, this state of things should be at once remedied, otherwise the assumption of a three per cent. rate of interest can by no means be justified."

The management expenses are provided by the honorary subscriptions, entrance fees, fines, and "special contributions of the benefited members."

In this valuation it appears that the valuer has made separate estimates of the present value of full pay, half pay, and quarter pay sick allowances respectively. He says, "the Tables I have used are those of Mr. Henry Ratchiffe's edition of 1861. It cannot be determined however from any of the tables in Mr. Ratchiffe's work what is the present value of the liability devolving upon the society by reason of the following clause in Rule XVII. 'One-half of the allowance due at the death of any member may, if required, be paid at the death of his wife, and the remainder at his own death; but this shall only be done at the death of the wife;' but the 25 per cent. added of the total present value of liabilities is in my opinion an ample provision for that liability, and also for any probable adverse contingencies that cannot be brought within the scope of calculation."

The results of Mr. Pinder's valuation appear to have been afterwards checked by Mr. Joseph Burne, actuary.

The members of this society paid the same rate of contribution, irrespective of age at entry, the said rate being 1 s. per month. The sums at death were in great measure met by levies. There were no additional contributions for management expenses, or for medical aid.

The present value of the sick allowances up to the age of 75 was obtained by taking the average amount of sick allowance per sick member over the five years preceding the date of valuation. Beyond the age of 75 the value of sick allowance was estimated to be the same as that of an annuity of half pay for the remainder of life.

From the valuation report, which contains a detailed examination of the society's sickness experience, the following passage in reference to the deficiency of 934 l. is extracted :—

“HOW THE DEFICIENCY SHOULD BE DEALT WITH.”

“I believe that the true position of the society is shown above, and that there exists a deficiency of 934 l. But a good deal depends upon the administration, and this deficiency might, to some extent, be reduced, if the committee will rigidly keep down the sick pay, and disallow it in long-standing cases. If the result of strict supervision and further restriction could reduce it to an average of 6 s. per week, the deficiency would be lessened by 1/3 of 2,812 l.=217 l. Again, although the allowances are valued at 4 s. a week pensions certain, after 75, if they could be confined to actual cases of inability to labour, some saving would be effected, but I am doubtful if it would be much. A better plan would be to reduce the 4 s. a week after 75 to 3 s. 6 d. a week, and this would lessen the deficiency by 1/3 of 1,341 l.=165 l. Further, if the whole of the subscriptions be kept available for the benefits, and the expenses of management be defrayed by a special levy, the additional sum of 89 l. will be wiped off the deficiency. Lastly, if the members' subscriptions be raised 2 d. a month, or 2 s. a year, about 300 l. more may be taken off the deficiency.

“The following is a summary of the several proposed measures :—

“(a.) Estimated saving by supervision and restriction of sick allowances	£. 217
“(b.) Ditto - by reduction of sick allowances to a permanent pension of 3 s. 6 d. a week after 75	165
“(c.) Ditto - by defraying expenses of management out of a special levy	89
“(d.) Ditto - by increase of subscriptions by 2 d. a month	300
“Total Estimated Saving	771

“The remainder of the deficiency may, I think, be allowed to stand until next valuation.”

These are described in the Valuation Returns as based on the "English Friendly Societies' Experience," but there seems reason to believe that the tables so described have not been published.

The management expenses are stated to be provided by the contributions of honorary members, but whether these contributions are sufficient for the purpose, or more than sufficient, is not stated. It is to be noticed, in connection with this valuation, that members do not appear to be compelled to assure for more than one benefit, assurances for deferred annuities and sums at death being apparently optional. In 1871 a valuation appears to have been made showing a considerable surplus, which was apportioned among the members as bonuses in the form of deferred annuities, payable after reaching the age of 65. It will be observed that two rates of interest have been used in the valuation, viz., 3 per cent. for the benefits for which members assured, and 4 per cent. for the benefits apportioned as bonus, the rate realised on the society's funds during the five months being 4 per cent. The report of Mr. Neison on the condition of the society states that from “the particulars to be gathered from the annual reports, the sickness experience appears to have been favourable;” but it is not stated what, if any, allowance has been made in estimating the sickness' liabilities for reductions in the scale of sick allowance in cases where sickness continues beyond the time for which full pay runs. The valuer's report makes no recommendation as to the disposal of the surplus brought out.

No special provision existed for expenses of management. No investigation into the society's sickness' experience was made. In the valuer's report on the condition of the society, he calls attention to the difficulty of making estimates based on averages in the case of a society with a small number of members; also to the complicated rules as to sick allowance, which rendered it "not easy to ascertain their probable financial effect to any certainty," and to the power reserved to place members, after attaining the age of 65 years, on a permanent reduced sick allowance. In estimating the liability under sickness contracts, an average rate of sick allowance was taken up to age of 70, and after that age members were assumed to be entitled to the permanent reduced sick allowance.

This society has since been dissolved by award, as although the valuer in his report entered at some length into the question of the steps to be taken to place the society on a sound footing, it was found that the members were in favour of the dissolution of the society.

R. P. Hardy, Actuary.	Artists' Amicable Fund.	Middlesex	1839	31 Dec. 1875.	123	Sick allowance throughout life. Sums at death (met by special levies).	£. s. d. 17,477 - -	£. s. d. 6,763 - -	£. s. d. 2,862 - - 757 at 2 1/2 d. 2,105 at 2 d. per cent. per diem.	£. s. d. 7,852 - - A valuation at 4 per cent. showed a deficiency of 6,081 l.	£. s. d. 3 7 6	3 per cent.	Manchester Unity Experience, 1866-1870, Rural Town and City combined.

The management expenses are met by a special levy.

From the valuer's report it appears that a detailed investigation into the society's sickness experience led to the following conclusions:—

- (1) That after age 75 the sickness allowance takes the form of a permanent pension.
- (2) That there appears to be not only a greater liability to sickness among the members of the fund, but that such sickness endures longer than amongst the general class whose experience is recorded in existing tables.

In cases of protracted sickness the full sick pay allowance is reduced one-third, but "the quantity of sickness has been so large that the total amount paid away has been equivalent to the full rate of pay throughout the whole expected period up to age 74, according to the tables used in the valuation."

Another point calling for notice is as follows:—The society had two accounts, one relating to old members, on whose funds the National Debt Commissioners allowed 2 1/2 d. per cent. per diem interest; and the other, relating to new members, bearing interest at 2 d. per cent. per diem. "Subsequent inquiry disclosed the fact that there was very little money invested at the higher rate, and that practically the whole investments now bear, and will continue to bear, only the lower rate." Accordingly, in the valuation, 2 d. per cent. per diem has been taken throughout as the rate of interest.

The liability under sickness benefit was valued up to age 74 at the full rate of sick pay; from and after age 75, as deferred life annuities, of two-thirds pay. The members' subscriptions had been increased 25 per cent. in the year 1875.

The valuer recommended that the society should take "prompt and efficient measures to remedy the very serious position of affairs. The rate of pay allowed to the members ought to be at once largely reduced or the subscriptions considerably raised; probably a combination of these two remedies would be most desirable. If no means be taken to supply the deficiency, it will grow rapidly, at compound interest, until the whole available resources are exhausted, and the remaining members will then be left without the means to provide for these allowances, that they are naturally looking forward to as an aid in supporting the burthens of advanced life."

A further valuation, on the assumption that the funds could be invested at compound interest at 4 per cent., showed a deficiency of 6,081 l., but as they may find it difficult (not being in business) to keep their money safely invested at that rate, he advised them, "in the event of their deciding to readjust the benefits or contributions, to place a portion of their funds in good 4 per cent. securities, and so help to alleviate the heavy burthen thrown upon the members."

Valuation tendered but not accepted.

In addition to the valuations enumerated above, the Provident Society, Stevenage, Herts, tendered a valuation of its assets and liabilities made by Mr. William Curtis Otter, Actuary, as a valuation in compliance with the Act. The grounds for declining to accept this valuation will be found fully set out in the copy correspondence between the actuary to the central office and Messrs. Joseph Elliott (secretary of the society) and W. C. Otter (the valuer appointed by the society). (See Appendix E.)

The circumstances under which it was decided not to accept this valuation may be briefly stated as follows:—

From the valuation abstract it appeared that the members were assured for sick allowance throughout life, but as an examination of the valuer's figures showed that the reserve brought out was less than the data stated to have been used would give, inquiry was made of the valuer, whether he had made any special adjustments not stated in the valuation report. The remarkable fact was thus elicited, that the valuer had in his valuation considered the sick allowance to cease at age 70, "not being aware that the value of sick allowance throughout life had been tabulated." A subsequent explanation was given, that in valuing full-pay sick allowance up to age 70, the valuer considered he was making a fair provision for the fact that in cases of prolonged sickness only half pay was allowed. Ultimately the valuer admitted (see Appendix E., p. 110) that "No doubt the most correct way to have valued the risks would have been to have valued the full pay for the first six months, and the half pay for the remainder of life;" adding that "this would not have made much difference from the result I give by the plan I adopted; therefore, I think you may pass my results as correct." In order to verify the accuracy of this statement the necessary calculations were made, from which it appeared that the difference referred to would have increased the reserve by 1,124 l.

In his report on the valuation Mr. Otter states that, "As regards the entrance fees I have supposed that you have accumulated them at the low rate of 3 per cent. from the time of payment to the 31st December 1875, less 10 per cent. for loss of time;" and a schedule was appended to the Report, headed, "Statement of the present value of the entrance fees supposed to have been invested at 3 per cent. compound interest from receipt of same to 31st December 1875," showing that 70 l. 15 s. 5 d. had been received on account of entrance fees, and that this sum was estimated to have accumulated to 178 l. 5 s. 1 d., and accordingly there appears an item among the assets of this amount. It will be seen, however, from the correspondence (Appendix E.) that on examination this asset was found to have no existence.

It may be added that the total realised assets of the society were 4,808 l. 1 s. 5 d., of which sum Mr. Otter declared 2,802 l. 9 s. 10 d. to be surplus, recommending that 1,800 l. should be paid as cash bonus to the members, the remainder to be set aside as a fund to meet management expenses.*

XI.—WORKING OF THE ACTS.

(1.) Applications for Inspectors and Special Meetings.

If new societies are still chary of registering under the Act of 1875, the various new provisions introduced by it are daily being tested by existing societies.

The provisions of Section 23 (1) of the Act relating to the appointment of inspectors to examine into the affairs of a society and report thereon, which were borrowed from the Companies and Railway Companies Acts, but have proved hitherto almost a dead letter under these, seem likely to be not unfrequently resorted to by Friendly Societies.

Before the first twelvemonth had elapsed, an application for this purpose had been received from a sufficient minority of the members of the Loyal Whitworth Lodge of the Manchester Unity of Odd Fellows, at Earl's Barton, Northamptonshire. The consent of the Treasury having been obtained to the inspection,

* One valuation, that of the West Herts Friendly Society, has been made during the present year by the actuary to the central office. The details of this will belong to next year's Report.

Report.

tion, and a sum deposited to cover expenses, the Chief Registrar, on 23rd December 1876, appointed Mr. H. R. Jennings, one of the public auditors for Middlesex (no auditor for Northamptonshire having been appointed), to conduct the inspection. A copy of the "Instructions" issued to the Inspector will be found in Appendix F. After an investigation, which lasted three days, Mr. Jennings drew up a careful and able report, copies of which were forwarded to both parties. The proceedings taken did not, unfortunately, restore concord in the Lodge, and its divisions have, in various ways, frequently occupied the time of the office. The Lodge has ended by seceding from the Order, and forming itself into an independent society.

In the course of the present year a second inspection has been applied for and carried out, in this case also of a Lodge of the Manchester Unity, the Loyal Industry Lodge, of Luton, Beds. It is a remarkable fact that in the second instance the application was really that of the Lodge itself, and its cost was voluntarily defrayed out of its funds. It thus appears that a provision primarily intended to secure the rights of minorities in societies has proved available to societies themselves.

Other applications have also been received, but it is doubtful whether they will be acted on. The Chief Registrar is not anxious to encourage the enforcement of the provisions in question by discontented minorities, and when it has appeared to him that the grounds of application resolved themselves into mere matters of account, he has not hesitated to suggest a stringent audit by a public auditor in place of the inspection.

An application has, moreover, been received and acted on during the present year, for the calling of a special meeting under Sub-section (2) of Section 23; and in this instance also the application was from the society itself.

(2.) Authorities to Prosecute given by the Central Office.

Still more frequent use has been made of the important new right conferred on members of Friendly Societies by Section 16 (9) of the Friendly Societies Act, 1875, viz., that of prosecuting in cases of fraud, &c., under an authority from the central office.

The provision bears that "if any person obtains possession, by false representation or imposition, of any property of a society, or, having the same in his possession, withholds or misapplies the same, or wilfully applies any part thereof to purposes other than those expressed or directed in the rules of the society, and authorised by this Act, he shall, on the complaint of the society, or of any member authorised by the society, or the trustees or committee of management of the same, or by the central office, or of the Chief Registrar or any Assistant Registrar by his authority, be liable," &c.

It has appeared to the Central office that by the true construction of the enactment above quoted, its power to authorise prosecutions by members should only be exercised where the society and its trustees or committee of management decline to take proceedings; but that where this is the case, and malpractices within the terms of the Section are alleged to have taken place, the authority should issue almost as a matter of course, since the central office has no means at its disposal for investigating the allegations made to it. Upon a statutory declaration, therefore, made by a member to the above effect (which would subject the person making it to prosecution, if false), it will give such an authority; implying no opinion upon the merits of the case, but simply that the person complaining has a locus standi for the purposes of prosecution at his own risk and costs. The forms adopted for the declaration and authority will be found in Appendix G.

Several applications have been made to the central office under the section above quoted, and in some instances authorities have been granted, the first on 26 September 1876, in the case of a society in Cornwall.

(3.) Prosecution for Illegal Transfer of Business.

The provisions as to illegal dissolution contained in Section 25, Sub-section 7 (c) of the Act of 1875, and which, with trifling abridgments in the wording, remain unaltered from those of the 18 & 19 Vict. c. 63, are very stringent. Any officer or person aiding or abetting in the dissolution of a society, otherwise wise than as provided in the Act, is liable, on summary conviction, to be committed with hard labour for a term not exceeding three months. These provisions had remained, however, practically a dead letter till put in force under the new Act, in reference to a different transaction to which they are thereby made applicable.

Section 14 of the 18 & 19 Vict. c. 63, as to the union of societies or the transfer of their engagements, was very imperfect. Societies might unite, or transfer their engagements to other friendly societies undertaking to fulfil their engagements, upon such terms as should be agreed upon "by the major part of the trustees, and also of the committee of management of both societies, or the majority of the members of each of such societies, at a general meeting convened for the purpose." Under cover of this provision frauds were easily committed. Amalgamations could either be got up by the trustees and committees alone, or else smuggled through general meetings called without due notice, and without any consent of the persons most concerned, viz., those in actual receipt of benefits, whilst the device of most frequent occurrence, that of an amalgamation with, or transfer to, a limited company, was left unprovided for. The stringent provisions of the Life Assurance Companies Act, 1870, in respect of amalgamations and transfers of business, applying only to companies, left this source of mischief equally untouched.

The Friendly Societies Act, 1875, Section 24, embraces cases of amalgamation and transfer of engagements, not only as between two or more Friendly Societies, but as between Friendly Societies and Companies. There must not only be in every case a special resolution (analogous to that under the Companies Acts), so as to secure a majority of three-fourths for the proposal at a meeting specially called for the purpose, and its confirmation at a subsequent meeting held at an interval of between 14 days and two months; but in the case of a Friendly Society the same consents are required (Sub-section 8 a) as for a dissolution, viz., that of five-sixths in value of the members (the "value" being determined by standing), and that of "every person for the time being receiving or entitled to any relief, annuity, or other benefit from the funds of the society, unless the claim of such person be first duly satisfied, or adequate provision be made for satisfying such claim." And it is enacted (Section 8 b) that the provisions of the Act as to the punishment of officers aiding or abetting a dissolution otherwise than as provided, and the remedy of persons dissatisfied with the provision made for satisfying their claims, shall apply to the case of amalgamation and transfer of engagements.

An important case under the above enactment was decided early in January of the present year at Birmingham by the stipendiary magistrate, Mr. T. C. S. Kynnersley, assisted by a colleague, when two of the officers of the United Family Life Assurance and Sick Benefit Society were sentenced to 14 days' imprisonment for aiding and abetting an illegal transfer of the business of the society to the British Workman Assurance Company, Limited.

That portion (Sub-head c) of the proviso to Section 2 k of the Act which bears that "upon application of the trustees or committee of management of a society desiring to amalgamate or transfer its engagements, notice of such application being published in the 'Gazette,' the Chief Registrar may, as therein mentioned, with the consent of the Treasury, order that any of the consents and conditions prescribed in this Act, or in any regulations made under this Act, be dispensed with, and may confirm the amalgamation or transfer," has also been acted upon. But after the consent of the Treasury had been obtained, it appeared at the hearing that the applicants had been ill-advised, and that the case was not one in which the intervention of the Chief Registrar was called for. In another case of the kind the application was not persisted in.

The procedure on these applications is now governed by Regulations 73-8; see Appendix B.

The Chief Registrar takes this opportunity of impressing upon societies that under the enactment referred to the exercise of his authority is entirely discretionary.

In the larger Orders the branches registered in 1876 were chiefly districts, owing to the circumstance pointed out in the Chief Registrar's last Report, that until a district is registered (or re-registered) as a branch, no lodge or court can be registered as belonging both to it and to the Order.

The conversion of lodges, &c., separately registered, into legal branches, has indeed, as already observed, been proceeding far more rapidly during the present year. It may be observed that the conditions which the Act appears to require for the registry of branches are the following, viz.: (1.) A central body; (2.) A fund under the control of the central body, to which any branch is bound to contribute; (3.) A provision for some kind of control of the central body over the branches; (4.) A provision indicating the conditions, if any, under which a branch may secede from the society. In addition to those abovenamed, the following Orders, among others, appear to fulfil the requisite conditions, and have either registered branches during the present year, or are in a position to do so:—

The Ancient Noble Order of Odd Fellows, Bolton Unity.
 Grand Lodge of the Ancient Free Gardeners.
 The Leicester Independent Order of Odd Fellows.
 The Independent Order of Odd Fellows, Norfolk and Norwich Unity.
 The Pure Order of Ancient Britons.
 The Kent United District Ancient Order of Britons.
 The Wirral Catholic Benevolent Society.
 The Grand Union of the Daughters of Temperance.
 The Grand Executive Lodge, United Order of Comical Fellows.
 The Loyal United Sisters.
 The Wrightington District Independent Order of Foresters.
 The Midland Counties Providential Friendly Society.
 The Southern Counties Brotherhood, Honourable Independent Order of Rechabites.

On the other hand, the Independent Order of Rechabites of the Salford Unity, the National Independent Order of Odd Fellows, the Order of Druids, the United Ancient Order of Druids, the United Order of Free Gardeners, the Order of True Ivorites, the Order of Ancient Britons, Merthyr and Dowlais Unity, the Grand Protestant Association of Orangemen, the Ancient Order of Romans, the Order of the Golden Fleece, and others, as well as the Ancient Order of Shepherds in connexion with the Ancient Order of Foresters, have not yet complied with the necessary requirements of the law, although several of them are in process of doing so, and others are understood to be only waiting the recurrence of their annual meetings to alter their rules for the purpose.

The Chief Registrar takes great pleasure in stating that his relations with the executive bodies of the various Orders with whom the provisions of the Act as to societies with branches have brought him into correspondence or contact have been uniformly friendly. From the two great orders in particular, the Manchester Unity of Odd Fellows and the Ancient Order of Foresters, the office has continued to receive much assistance. It would be unjust not to record the fact that in carrying out the new Act the Ancient Order of Foresters has been more especially successful. The signature of Mr. Shawcross, its permanent secretary, affords an almost perfect guarantee that documents offered by him for registry are in due form.

Model rules for branches have been settled under the Act for several orders, more particularly the Manchester Unity, the Ancient Order of Foresters, and the Ancient Order of Shepherds, Ashton Unity. The value of these model rules for promoting expedition in the proceedings of the Registry Office is, however, diminished by the circumstance that they are generally reprinted locally in a different size and type, so that collation with them takes almost as much time as the perusal of original rules.

It must be observed, that notwithstanding the passing of the Friendly Societies Amendment Act, 1876, the difficulties referred to in the Report of last year did not at once disappear. A fear, amounting in some cases almost to panic, had been spread through a portion of the orders, and more especially among the Foresters, that by re-registering as branches under the new Acts courts and lodges would lose all control over their own funds. No doubt it is the case that since the law now recognises every member of a branch as member of the order itself, he is bound at once, within the limits of the law, by all the rules of the order. And it is theoretically conceivable that an order should pass a rule for centralising all the funds of its branches, except one, which by the terms of the law must remain under the control of the branch, or that of its committee or officers. But considering the democratic constitution of these societies, as governed (with very few exceptions) by their annual meetings of delegates; the notices required by their rules for the proposal of any amendment; the special majorities generally fixed for the passing of amendments, and the insistence by the Registry Office upon the existence of a bonâ fide provision for secession before any branch can be registered; the adoption of any such measure as above-mentioned appears almost impossible, and if it were ever adopted the right of branches in the minority to secede from the order can be exercised.

The proceedings, however, of the High Court meeting of the Ancient Order of Foresters, now being held at Greenwich, show that a more correct understanding of the effects of the new Acts is now becoming diffused, all amendments substantially opposed to the registry of courts as branches under the Acts having been rejected by large majorities. On the other hand, resolutions have been passed, on the proposal of the executive council of the order, establishing, as a "basis of union" not to be altered except with the consent of nine-tenths of the delegates present and entitled to vote at a High Court meeting, that "the whole of the funds and property of each branch shall be under the exclusive control of the members and trustees thereof, subject only to the general laws of the order with respect to the investment of such funds and their application to the objects of the branch and the objects of the district branch with which the court may be connected, and also the objects of the order."

It may be mentioned that the form of the "society with branches," as sanctioned by Section 29 of the Act of 1875, has proved to be much more widely available than was originally supposed. The early conversion of the "United Patriots' Friendly Society," one of the general societies, has already been referred to, and of late a movement has commenced for the like conversion of county societies. The circumstance that whilst the Act requires every branch to have a separate fund, administered by itself, or by a committee or officers appointed by itself, it does not specify which fund this shall be, enables societies to satisfy its requirements by having a management fund only under the administration of their branches, and this is the plan which the societies in question have hitherto adopted.

That when societies attain a certain magnitude the federal form is the only practicable one, if a bonâ fide self-government has to be kept up, seems to be shown by the instance of the Hearts of Oak Friendly Society, the giant of the "general societies," which, through having retained the machinery of an ordinary Friendly Society, has grown so large as to find it latterly almost impossible to amend its rules, for want of a meeting-place sufficiently capacious to hold all those of its 100,000 members who choose to attend, and sufficiently sonorous at the same time to enable them to understand what is going on. The introduction of delegate and proxy voting, which are allowed by the present Act, may indeed supply other modes of escape from this dilemma,* but hardly a certain one, and it is the advantage of the federal form that under it the dilemma cannot so much as arise.

Report.

(6.) Dividing Societies.

One of the objects of the Act, that of bringing within the pale of law societies till then excluded from it, is in course of being realised. The first dividing society was registered on the 8th June 1876, another on the 17th, and 10 in all in the course of the year. Seven existing societies had amendments registered for the periodical division of their funds. In Liverpool particularly the practice of dividing continues to be very prevalent.

(7.) Construction of Section 30.

A question of considerable importance to the great bulk of Friendly Societies has recently been raised, as to the extent of the application of Section 30 of the Act of 1875.

The preamble of that section reads as follows:—

“The provisions of this section apply only to Friendly Societies, and, except as after mentioned, industrial assurance companies receiving contributions by means of collectors at a greater distance than 10 miles from the registered office of the society.”

It has been held, it would seem, by a learned county court judge (Mr. Serjeant Atkinson), that the qualifying words, “receiving contributions by means of collectors at a greater distance than 10 miles from the registered office of the society,” apply only to industrial assurance companies, and that therefore all Friendly Societies are within the section; are thus required, amongst other things, to give specific notice before forfeiture of benefits, and are subject in all disputes to the jurisdiction of the county court or the magistrates, whatever be the provisions of their own rules on the subject.

That such was not the intention of Parliament in passing the Act, but that the section was considered only to apply to a limited class of bodies, may be taken as matter of notoriety, and is sufficiently indicated by the marginal note, “Societies receiving Contributions by Collectors”; but it is no doubt true that marginal notes do not form, legally, part of a Statute, and that its meaning is not to be inferred from the debates which led to its being enacted, but only from its own words.

It has, therefore, to be considered whether Mr. Serjeant Atkinson’s interpretation bears out the intentions of the Act, so far as they can be gathered from its language.

The Registry Office has, from the first, without hesitation, construed the section in question in the narrower sense indicated by the marginal note, i. e., as applying, under the preamble, only to such Friendly Societies or Industrial Assurance Companies as receive contributions, by means of collectors, at a greater distance than 10 miles from the registered office of the society (or company).

Any other construction would, it has appeared to the Registry Office, stultify Section 22 of the Act as to the settlement of disputes in registered societies. If Section 30 governs all Friendly Societies, then Section 22, instead of applying, as it professes to do, to registered societies generally, would only apply to cattle insurance societies, benevolent societies, working men’s clubs, and specially authorised societies, forming together but about 1-25th of the whole number, and the word “only” in the preamble to Section 30 (“apply only to Friendly Societies”) would be altogether misleading. What the Act treats as the rule would prove to be the exception; and what (by the use of the word “only”) it treats as the exception, would become, practically, the rule.

The

* The Hearts of Oak Society has finally succeeded in passing a rule for the election of delegates by means of voting papers (registered 23 July 1877).

The wording of the preamble to Section 30 itself, in the opinion of the Chief Registrar and his colleagues, bears out this view. Had the qualification been meant to apply only to industrial assurance companies, it is difficult to conceive how the "registered office of the society" would have been mentioned; it would have been "the registered office of the company." The word "society" appears clearly to connect the end of the preamble with its beginning, so as to make the qualification apply to Friendly Societies as well as to companies.

In confirmation of this view, the 57th Treasury Regulation may be referred to, which provides that, "for the purposes of the Act, so far as its provisions apply to industrial assurance companies . . . the registered office under the Companies Acts, or the principal place of business" of a company not so registered," shall be deemed to be the registered office of the same under the Act." Now it is only in Section 30 that a registered office is spoken of in any connexion with an industrial assurance company, and the effect of the regulation is thus to interpret "registered office of the society" in reference to companies. Having regard to the latter part of Section 30, sub-section 13, this part of the regulation was, perhaps, superfluous, but it is clearly based on the primary use of the "word" society in its natural sense in the preamble to that section.

XII.—DISSOLUTIONS.

It will be remembered that a new ground of dissolution by award was added by the Act of 1875 to that previously allowed, the Registrar being empowered to dissolve societies on application in cases of actuarial as well as of actual or commercial insolvency. Section 25 (8) of the Act enacts that upon the application of a stated proportion or number of the members, "setting forth that the funds of the society are insufficient to meet the existing claims thereon, or that the rates of contribution fixed in the rules of such society are insufficient to cover the benefits assured, and the grounds upon which such insufficiency is alleged, and requesting an investigation into the affairs of such society with a view to the dissolution thereof, the Chief Registrar may by himself, or by any assistant registrar, or by any actuary or public auditor whom the Chief Registrar may appoint in writing under his hand, investigate the affairs of the society," on such notice as therein mentioned; and that "if upon such investigation it appears that the funds of the society are insufficient to meet the existing claims thereon, or that the rates of contribution fixed in the rules of the society are insufficient to cover the benefits assured to be given by the same, the Chief Registrar may, if he considers it expedient so to do, award that the society shall be dissolved, and its affairs wound-up, and shall direct in what manner the assets of the society shall be dissolved or appropriated;" and the enactment is qualified by a proviso, entirely novel in Friendly Society legislation, "that the Chief Registrar may suspend his award for such period as he may deem necessary to enable the society to make such alterations and adjustment of contributions and benefits as will, in his judgment, prevent the necessity of such award of dissolution being made." The authority already given by the previously existing Act, to make an award for distribution of funds only, where this is stated in the instrument of dissolution to be left to the award of the Chief Registrar, is moreover continued by an earlier sub-section (2 d).

The new ground for investigation allowed by the Act of 1875 was put forward in several instances during the past year, and is likely to be not unfrequently made use of by prudent minorities in societies. Since, however, the question of the sufficiency of rates to cover benefits may involve inquiries equivalent to a valuation, and there appeared some danger that the provision might be perverted to the purpose of obtaining official valuations in the most complicated cases for a fee of 1*l.*, the 79th Treasury Regulation has provided (see Appendix B) that "where application is made for an investigation into the affairs of a society with a view to the dissolution thereof, upon the ground that the rates of contribution fixed in the rules of such society are insufficient to cover the benefits assured, the Chief Registrar may, if he thinks fit, at any time before making his award, require the payment of such fee as he may deem reasonable, not exceeding the scale fixed by Regulation 71," viz., that for valuations by actuaries effected through the medium of the Registrar.

Report.

Since the appointment of the actuary to the central office all investigations with a view to dissolution have been carried on by him.

In one case during the year 1876 the authority given to the Chief Registrar to suspend his award of dissolution in order to enable the society to obviate its necessity by readjusting their scale of contributions and benefits, was made use of, and the same thing has taken place during the present year.

The following particulars relating to some of the societies dissolved, and whose funds were distributed by award in the course of the year 1876, may not be without interest. It may be safely stated that except in the case of the Oxfordshire Friendly and Medical Society, whose rates of contribution were certified by an actuary, the benefits assured to the members were wholly out of proportion to the contributions charged, and it will be noted that no restriction was in any case placed upon the length of time for which a member could receive sick pay of some kind or other.

The amounts received by the members as their share of the funds varied from 157 per cent. to 257 per cent. of the contributions paid by said members respectively.

The tables of contribution had been certified by the late Mr. Griffith Davies, Actuary, and the sources of the society's exceptional profits appear to have been the large profits accruing by the withdrawal of members assured for deferred annuities, &c., who had been induced to leave by the attractions of dividing and other societies in the neighbourhood.

The full sick pay allowance was six times the monthly contribution, which also assured to the member permanent half-pay sick allowance, and £. 5 at death.

This society was pronounced insolvent in 1870, and again in 1873, by Mr. A. H. Bailey, actuary of the London Assurance Corporation; and application was made to the then Registrar to dissolve the society under the Act at that time in force, which he was unable to do, the insolvency being actuarial.

The society was a sort of mixture of savings bank and ordinary friendly society, and the benefits assured to the members were of a nature hardly admitting of an estimate of their value being made.

If a member resigned or lost his situation, he could draw out what he had paid by way of contributions, less a certain percentage thereof.

If he died while a member, a sum increasing to a maximum of 50 l. was payable on his death.

By the rules of the society, when the funds exceeded 300 l., the members' benefits were increased by 5 to 10 per cent. per member, and, in addition, a sum of 5 per cent. on total subscriptions paid by each member, was divided per annum. In this way a sum exceeding 350 l. was divided among the members during the last five years of the society's existence.

Some opposition to the dissolution was made by the oldest members, but the actuary to this office reported that the principles of the society were wholly unsound and its affairs incapable of adjustment.

Although no longer required by the Act, as was previously the case, it seems useful that the practice of giving particulars of dissolutions should be continued. In Part II. of this Report will be found a list of societies dissolved during the year, so far as the Central Office has been informed of the fact. Notwithstanding the stringent provisions contained for many years in successive Acts of Parliament against dissolution, otherwise than in manner provided by statute, and to which reference has been made in a foregoing paragraph, about half of the known dissolutions took place without the observance of the prescribed conditions.

The Bradford Caledonian Friendly Society, consisting of 146 members, made application for an award of dissolution, the funds of the society being alleged to be insufficient to meet the existing claims thereon, according to a report on the affairs of the society made by Mr. James Meikle, actuary. The usual investigation was made into the affairs of the society, and the results seemed to show that if certain alterations and adjustments of the contributions and benefits were made, the necessity of an award of dissolution might be prevented. (Friendly Societies Act, 25, 8, b.)

The Chief Registrar, on the report of the actuary to the central office, suspended his award accordingly. Copies of the actuary's report and of the suspending award will be found in Appendix H.

It may be added that the recommendations of the actuary to the central office have since been unanimously adopted by the members of the society.

XIII.—THE REGISTRARS OF DEATHS—INSURANCE OF CHILDREN.

Notwithstanding the provisions of the Friendly Societies Amendment Act, 1876, a certain amount of agitation has continued to be kept up on the ground of the Registrar's certificate of death being made compulsory. A more legitimate subject of complaint has arisen from the reluctance still shown by many Registrars of Deaths to accept the limitation of price to 1 s. By arrangement with the Registrar General of Births, Deaths, and Marriages, complaints on this head which reach the Central Office are all now transmitted to him. One Registrar was stated to have charged 2*s.* 7*d.* instead of 1 s. for a certificate, because the society was registered under the name of "The ——— Benefit Society," and not of "The ——— Friendly Society." In one instance a Registrar of Deaths appears, in open violation of Section 28 (4) of the Act, to have issued certificates for double the legal amount (12*l.*) on the death of a child one year old.

An idea appears to have been entertained by many of the Registrars of Deaths, in consequence of the general authority given to the Registrar of Friendly Societies to prosecute for penalties under the Act, that it is sufficient for them to inform him that a breach of the law in respect to certificates of death has been committed for him to take up the matter at once and prosecute. It may be as well for the Chief Registrar to observe that no prosecution is instituted by him under the Act without the sanction of the Treasury. But inasmuch as Sub-section 2 of Section 14 of the Act of 1875, by which the taking out of a Registrar's certificate for death at all ages is rendered compulsory upon registered societies, was inserted at the instance only of the Registrar General, and for the protection of the interests of the Registrars of Deaths, the Chief Registrar would not feel himself justified in applying for the sanction of the Treasury to prosecutions which would virtually be instituted solely in defence of those interests which the parties themselves are fully competent to protect, under the provision allowing any person aggrieved to sue; and the same applies in cases arising under the 28th section, so long as the offence consists only in the omission to take out a certificate for a payment on the death of a child under 10. It may be otherwise in cases where the statutory limits are exceeded, so as to involve a presumption of danger to infantile life. But in all such cases it is for this office to consider whether the circumstances are such as to call for an official prosecution. So all but futile appear to have been the provisions of the previously existing law limiting the amount of payments on the deaths of children under 10, whilst only medical certificates were required; so widespread appears to have been the popular ignorance as to the existence of any legal limits, that in cases of insurance prior to 1st January 1876, considerable leniency would under any circumstances be called for, and the Chief Registrar is glad to say that very few instances have come to his notice in which over-insurance has taken place since the Act of 1875 came into force. One large industrial assurance company is, however, accused by its rivals of systematically violating the law by instructing its collectors to pay without receipt and without inquiry all sums assured.

The liability of unregistered societies to the penalties of Section 28 for irregular payments on the death of children has thrown some light on one of the most obscure portions of the Friendly Society system, viz., the prevalence of unregistered societies. In the single town of Stockport the Chief Registrar has been informed by the secretary to one of these, that there are about 40 unregistered burial clubs, and he has been supplied with a printed list of 27, numbering together 53,317 members, and comprising one society of 9,000 members, one of 5,000, five of between 3,000 and 4,000, four of between 2,000 and 3,000, and five of between 1,000 and 2,000. It is clear from this that an enormous number of these must exist in the manufacturing counties, which have hitherto defied investigation, and which may easily escape the notice of the Registrars of Deaths. It need hardly be pointed out, that if the practice of insuring burial benefits is a danger to infant life, such danger must be greatest in unregistered societies; and the fact that most of them are alleged still to disobey the law, in paying money on the death of children without a Registrar's certificate, only heightens such danger. Several of the unregistered burial societies at Stockport meet at schoolrooms (one, at least, is directly connected with a Sunday-school); and considering that registry is gratuitous, it seems extraordinary that the managers of such schools do not take steps to have the societies registered.

In a few instances applications were received for registry of societies with a combined membership of persons above and below 16, which the Act does not allow, and it has had to be pointed out that in a society of members above 16 only the children of members can be assured (without becoming members) for burial benefits.

Since the passing of the Friendly Societies' Amendment Act, 1876, revised forms of application and certificate have been issued by the Registrar General of Births, Deaths, and Marriages.*

XIV.—FRIENDLY SOCIETIES AND THE POOR LAW.

Besides the Friendly Societies Amendment Act, 1876, printed in an Appendix to the last Report, an enactment affecting Friendly Societies is contained in another measure of the past Session, the "Divided Parishes and Poor Law Amendment Act, 1876" (39 & 40 Vict. c. 61), which only came under the notice of this office some time after it was passed. By Section 23 of the Act in question it is provided that—

"Where any pauper shall be entitled to any annuity or periodical payment, the trustee or other person bound to make payment of the same to the pauper, may from time to time pay to the board of guardians of any union or parish, out of the instalments which have become due, the cost incurred in the relief of such pauper accrued since the last instalment, and such payment shall be a legal discharge to such trustee or other person for so much money as shall have been so paid.

"Where the guardians incur any expenses in the relief of a pauper lunatic, being a member of a benefit or Friendly Society, and as such entitled to receive any payment, they may recover from him as a debt, or from his executors, administrators, or assigns in case of his death, the sum so expended by them as aforesaid; and the managing body of such society, after notice from the clerk to the guardians, served previously to the money being paid over, shall be required to pay the same to such guardians, and shall be exonerated on payment thereof from any further liability.

"Where any trustee, manager, or other person shall decline to make any payment, the guardians may apply to the justices in petty sessions assembled, and such justices may, if satisfied that it is right under all the circumstances to do so, make an order upon him to pay the requisite amounts then due to the guardians at once, and to pay from time to time in future, as the liability in respect of the relief arises thereafter.

"Provided that this clause shall not have effect unless and until the guardians, or their relieving officer, shall have declared the relief to be given on loan, nor in respect of any relief granted contrary to the rules and orders made under the authority of the statutes in that behalf."

It seems doubtful whether the first paragraph of the section above quoted, that relating to annuities, would affect annuities insured for in Friendly Societies; but annuity benefits are so rare in Friendly Societies, that the question is very seldom likely to arise. The remaining paragraphs of the section clearly do apply to Friendly Societies, and an amount of agitation has been aroused against them in some quarters, which is, perhaps, more than commensurate with their importance.

For

* A remarkable testimony of Dr. Russell, medical officer for Glasgow, as to the effect of the Friendly Societies Act in diminishing the number of uncertified deaths, is quoted by the Assistant Registrar for Scotland in his Report, post, p. 57.

Report.

For the incidence of the enactments is confined to cases of lunacy, which can hardly be supposed to be so prevalent amongst the provident members of Friendly Societies as in the community at large, and which, in many cases, is formally excluded from the definition of sickness under the rules, and it is expressly provided by the last paragraph of the section, as pointed out in a letter from Mr. Danby P. Fry, Assistant Secretary to the Local Government Board, to the Sheffield Board of Guardians, that the section has no effect until the relief granted to a pauper lunatic has been declared to be a loan. On the other hand, it is certain that in one or two instances the section has been enforced by boards of guardians and magistrates without regard to the last paragraph of the enactment, and it is also certain that it rests with the former to render the enactment one of frequent application, by granting relief habitually, instead of rarely as hitherto, by way of loan.

Moreover, although in terms the enactment only applies to the case of a pauper lunatic, being a member of a benefit or Friendly Society, and as such entitled to receive any payment, it has been held by one stipendiary magistrate that a provision, already existing in many rules, that a member becoming a pauper shall cease to be entitled to any of the benefits of the society, does not prevent the application of the section. In the absence of express words negating the effects of such a rule, the decision in question seems rather to strain the law. Societies, indeed, in many cases want something more than a mere suspension of benefits to the member himself, viz., a power to pay such benefits to the family of the lunatic, whilst the latter is being relieved at the expense of the poor rate. There is, no doubt, much to be said morally in favour of such a course, since the lunacy of the bread-winner must greatly straiten the circumstances of his family. But it appears to the Central Office, that according to the true construction of Section 8 of the Friendly Societies Act (as indeed of every previous enactment on the subject), defining Friendly Societies as being those "for the relief or maintenance of the members, their husbands, wives, children, fathers, mothers, brothers, or sisters, nephews or nieces, or wards, being orphans, during sickness or other infirmity, whether bodily or mental, in old age (which shall mean any age after 50) or in widowhood," &c., the words "during sickness or other infirmity," "in old age," "in widowhood," must be construed as applying only to the sickness or infirmity, old age or widowhood, of the object of relief or maintenance. Whilst, therefore, the Central Office is of opinion that the benefits of members of societies, being pauper lunatics, might probably be applied, where the rules allow, for the relief of their wives or other relations, within the degrees of kinship specified by the Act, if themselves subject to one of the afflictions specified by it, sickness or infirmity, old age or widowhood, it does not appear to it that any rule to apply such benefits generally for the relief of their wives and families can be registered whilst the law remains as it is.

It may be pointed out that the section in question of the Divided Parishes and Poor Law Amendment Act, 1876, appears to apply to all Friendly Societies, whether registered or unregistered. Whether the introduction of the term "benefit society" would cover trade unions, assuring sickness or other benefits, is more doubtful. It need hardly be said that, in common parlance, a "friendly" society and a "benefit" society are the same, but the insertion of both terms implies that some distinction between the two was supposed by the Legislature to exist; though what that distinction is can only be decided by judicial interpretation.

XV.—FRIENDLY SOCIETIES IN THE COLONIES.

This office has again received the valuable "Statistics of Friendly Societies" in Victoria, for the year 1875, showing an increase in the number of societies returning. A brief abstract of this document will be found in Appendix I., Section 1.

It has also received a copy of the Report of the Royal Commission appointed in the colony "to inquire into the working of the Friendly Societies statute," together with Minutes of Evidence and Appendices, undated, but which, from internal evidence, appears to have been drawn up after March 1876.

From

From this interesting document it would appear that the system pursued hitherto in the colony in respect to Friendly Societies has been singularly cumbrous and expensive. There have been three separate elements in the registry of every society: certification of rules at a fee of 3 l. by a certifying barrister, certification of tables by a certifying actuary, whose fee is not fixed by statute, and registration at a fee of 10 s. by a Registrar whose office is purely honorary. The actuary's certificate is made compulsory in all cases, and this requirement appears to have produced such a dead lock that in the course of about a year and a half the present actuary had only certified one society out of 10 that had applied to him. The application to Friendly Societies of the distinction between the two stages of "provisional" and "complete registration," once enacted in this country in respect of joint stock companies, but long since exploded, adds further to the complexity of the system. On the other hand, whilst returns are required from the societies, there is no penalty for the failure to send them.

The summary of the Commissioners' recommendations will be found in Appendix I., Section 2. Whilst they embody many of the provisions of the Friendly Societies' Act, 1875, it will be found that they depart from it on several important points. The payment of fees for registry is to continue, and all new societies are to be required to register, but all provisions for granting annuities and endowments are to be excluded from the Act. The certification of all rules by an actuary, it would seem, is to continue. Periodical valuations are to be made compulsory, but the Government is to undertake the valuation (at a small fee), the societies furnishing only the data. Whilst periodical audits are not to be compulsory, the Registrar is to be empowered to order an audit of the accounts of a society, on the memorial of 10 members. The funds of insolvent or seceding branches are to be transferred to the parent society, &c. The recommendations of the Commissioners appear to involve on several points an amount of Government interference which, in the mother country, would probably arouse considerable outcry.

XVI.—GERMAN LEGISLATION ON FRIENDLY SOCIETIES.

A law was passed by the German Parliament on registered Friendly Societies (eingeschriebene Hilfskassen) on the 7th April 1876, which is instructive both through its resemblances to and its differences from our own legislation on the subject. A translation of it will be found in Appendix K., together with that of another law repealing certain provisions of the "Gewerbeordnung," or general law on trades.

The objects of a German Hilfskasse, or Friendly Society, are confined to the maintenance or relief in sickness or convalescence of the members, medical treatment for their families, and maintenance for the families of deceased members, thus excluding payments on death, relief on travel, and various other objects permitted with us. The relief given during convalescence appears, on the other hand, to form a useful addition to our own Friendly Society purposes.

The name of the society must not be the same as that of any other society in the same place or commune, and must have added to it the words "registered Friendly Society."

The provisions required to be inserted in the rules do not greatly differ from those required in the case of an English society, except where they refer to the contingency, unknown with us, of employers being legally bound to contribute to the funds of the society. It is expressly provided that the rules shall contain no provision not connected with the objects of the society. The provisions for quinquennial valuations, for returns of sickness and mortality and of balance-sheets, correspond closely with our own. The leading differences are, first, that on many points which are with us left to the discretion of societies, a fixed rule is laid down by law; second, that an amount of interference on the part both of the local and higher Government authorities is allowed or prescribed, which, if attempted in this country, would lead to the loudest clamour against the officialism of the system.

As illustrations of the first point, it may be mentioned that the period when a member becomes entitled to benefits, with us altogether discretionary, is fixed by the German law as the 13th week at latest after admission, and the right to relief is preserved to the member for the same period after withdrawal or exclusion. Thirteen weeks are again fixed as the minimum duration of relief, if the disability to work should so long last. A minimum and maximum amount are fixed for the daily relief itself, which for men must be at least one-half, for women one-third, of the wages of ordinary day-workers, calculated on the average of the year, in the locality of the society, at the date of the rules, such amount to be determined by the judgment of the communal board, but, on the other hand, must not exceed five times the legal minimum. The proportion of medical to other relief is limited to two-thirds at most. The grounds on which exclusion is allowed are specified by law. A society is not allowed to refuse relief for particular diseases.

As instances under the second head, it may be pointed out that whilst the refusal to register a society is only allowed when the rules do not comply with the provisions of the law, and an appeal is open against it (though apparently only to an administrative superior), yet all societies are considered to be under superintendence. The superintending authority (Aufsichtsbehörde) appointed for the purpose by the provincial Government, has a right at all times to inspect the books of the society; it receives yearly balance-sheets, may require notice of withdrawals, may give formal notices to societies—entailing dissolution if not complied with—to call in arrears of contributions, or exclude defaulters, as soon as more than one-fourth of the members are in arrear, to pay benefits four weeks due, or to revoke illegal resolutions of the general meetings; may appoint liquidators to wind up a society, if the Board fails to do so, or if the society is closed; may call general meetings when the board of direction fails to do so; may fine members of the board or liquidators of the society up to 100 marks for failing to do their duty in sending returns and notices of withdrawals. The higher administrative authority (höhere Verwaltungsbehörde) is the one which decides on the registration of the rules and registers them, receives quinquennial valuations, returns of the number of members, of the sickness and mortality, &c., and orders the closing of a society (subject to an administrative appeal) in five specified cases. It is, moreover, the “superintending authority” for all federations of societies whose boards of direction sit within its jurisdiction. The communal board again plays a subordinate part in the official surveillance, which appears distinct from that of the “superintending” or higher “administrative” authority. It receives, in the first instance, the rules in duplicate, and transmits them to the higher administrative authority. It values the current wages on the basis of which the relief is to be calculated. It has to receive notice of the composition of the board of direction, as well as of all changes in such board. It identifies the board for purposes of title.

It is not too much to say that under such a weight of official oversight the free and multiform development of our Friendly Societies would have been impossible. Yet these are the provisions relating to what may be termed the free societies. The fact must now be recalled that these form only one portion of the German system. According to the law of 8th April, amending the “Gewerbe Ordnung,” the formation of Friendly Societies may be ordered by local regulations. In this case the communal authorities, after hearing the parties interested, appear to frame the rules of the society, and by local regulation it may be made compulsory on all working men aged 16 years and upwards to join it, unless already members of some registered society, and in like manner compulsory on all employers to advance the contributions of their workmen to the society so established by the commune, up to the amount of one-half of their wages, and to subscribe themselves to the society, up to the amount of one-half of the contributions of their workmen. The same powers as those given to the communes are given also to “larger communal unions.”

Wherever the obligation to join on the part of the workmen exists, there can be no lowering of contributions nor raising of benefits, without the approval of the communal board, or that of the larger communal union; and where, according to the last year's balance-sheet, the receipts of the society have not met its lawful expenditure, the same authority can require the contributions to be raised, or the benefits to be reduced to the legal minimum. Further still, the communal authorities, or those of the larger communal union, may, under certain certain circumstances, entrust the management of the society to persons of their choice, or even undertake it themselves.

Report.

Legislation of the above description obviously belongs to a social state widely different from that of our own country.

XVII.—INDUSTRIAL AND PROVIDENT (CO-OPERATIVE) SOCIETIES.

The assimilation for most purposes of Industrial and Provident to Friendly Societies effected by the Industrial and Provident Societies' Bill of last year (since passed as the Industrial and Provident Societies' Act, 1876, 39 & 40 Vict. c. 45), was dwelt upon by the Chief Registrar in his Report for 1875.

In pursuance of their powers under this Act, regulations were approved by the Treasury on 21st October 1876,* which will be found in Appendix L. They follow in wording, as closely as possible, the regulations under the Friendly Societies' Act. The forms are designated, as far as practicable, by the same letters, and the scale of fees is the same, with this exception, that every amendment of the rules of a co-operative society is now subject to a fee of 10 s.

A new form of return has been framed for co-operative societies. It may be worth while to observe that the annual return hitherto required to be sent by co-operative societies to the Registrar has till now been based not so much upon the requirements of the Industrial and Provident Societies' Acts themselves as upon those of a Parliamentary Return which has been moved for every year in the House of Commons in respect of such societies. The form of the latter was very elaborate, and had become the subject of many complaints from the smaller societies on account of its complexity. It being understood, moreover, that owing to the heavy cost of printing the Parliamentary Return the Government is not disposed to consent to its issue every year, it appeared to the Chief Registrar that it would be advisable, for ordinary years at all events, to adopt a form framed solely to meet the requirements of the new Act, and as nearly as possible similar to that under the Friendly Societies' Act, 1875, the provisions of which as to the annual return are virtually identical with those of the Industrial and Provident Societies' Act, 1876. And as Sub-section 6 of Section 10 of the Friendly Societies' Act, 1875, requiring the Chief Registrar to report every year to Parliament is one of those which, by Section 25 of the Industrial and Provident Societies' Act, 1876, are to be deemed incorporated with the latter, the Chief Registrar proposes to include, in future, in his yearly reports, an abstract of Industrial and Provident Societies' returns, as well as of those of Friendly Societies.

It has already been stated that the public auditorships, under the Friendly Societies and Industrial and Provident Societies' Acts, are henceforth intended to be held together. For the conditions under which they are held, see Appendix B., already referred to. The only practical difference between the audits under the two Acts will lie in the scale of fees, which in the case of co-operative societies is based, not upon the number of members, but upon the total yearly sales. The larger societies, moreover, being very well able to take care of their own interests, and to secure the services of accountants in good repute for their audits, the scale of fees only applies to societies with maximum yearly sales of 25,000*l.* (or something under 500*l.* a week).

Model rules for co-operative societies, under the Act of 1876, have been framed by Mr. E. Vansittart Neale, and are accepted by the central office.

It may be mentioned that the new provisions of the Act of 1876, e.g., those for the conversion of industrial and provident societies into companies, are beginning to be acted on.

The following is an abstract, as respects England and Wales, of the Return of Industrial and Provident Societies for the year 1875 (ordered by the House of Commons to be printed, 13th February 1877):—

These figures indicate, as usual, a successful trade, in which a profit of over 21 per cent. upon capital was made, and the capital was turned over rather more than three times in the year. The small amount of the reserve fund, amounting to little more than 4 per cent. on the total capital, may indeed show that the societies have not much to fall back upon in hard times; but as, on the other hand, little more than one-seventh of the capital is borrowed, the losses, if any, would fall almost entirely on the members themselves, who indeed are understood to contribute also most of the borrowed money.

Two counties stand far ahead of all the others in the number of societies and of members, and the amount of capital and of business: Lancashire, with 184 societies, 129,013 members, 2,061,398 l. share capital, and 6,758,136 l. received for goods; and Yorkshire, with 198 societies, 118,888 members, 1,340,415 l. share capital, and 3,684,173 l. received for goods. No other county reaches 50 societies or 40,000 members, but two have more than 100,000 l. share capital, and two (but one not the same) have received more than 1,000,000 l., viz., Durham (265,988 l. share capital; cash received, 1,236,775 l.); Northumberland (share capital, 122,349 l.); and Middlesex (cash received, 1,076,509 l.). The last case is accounted for by the receipts of the Civil Service Supply Association, Limited, amounting to 925,332 l., or nearly nine-tenths of the total for the county.

In point of numbers the seven largest societies are the—

No other society has as many as 5,000 members, but 87, besides the seven above-named, have upwards of 1,000.

Three societies have over 100,000 l. share capital, viz.:—

Besides 19 others with sales of more than 100,000 l., of which 11 in Lancashire, 5 in Yorkshire, and 1 each in Durham, Leicester, and Northumberland.

Of the 10,454 l. allowed for educational purposes during the year, 6,951 l. was allowed by Lancashire, and 1,244 by Durham, only four other counties (Yorkshire, Cheshire, Northumberland, and Essex) allowing over 100 l., and these six counties making up together 10,048 l. out of the 10,454 l. The fashion of such allowances is indeed so entirely local that they are found only in 24 counties out of 48, and that 29 societies (one in Cheshire, four in Durham, 20 in Lancashire, one in Northumberland, and three in Yorkshire) allowed over 100 l. each, or more than was allowed severally by 18 counties out of those 24. XVIII.—TRADE UNIONS.

The passing of the Trade Union Act Amendment Act, 1876, having rendered necessary the issue of some new regulations, the whole of the existing regulations of 8th December 1871 and 18th August 1873, were, as in the case of building societies (see Report for 1875, p. 28) revoked, and a new set issued by Mr. Secretary Cross, 1st November 1876. (See Appendix M.)

It may now be said that by means of the regulations issued under the Friendly Societies Acts, the Industrial and Provident Societies Act, the Building Societies Acts, and the Trade Union Acts, the practice of the office in respect of these four classes of bodies has been to a great extent assimilated, although the divergent language of the statutes in some respects creates still some useless discrepancies.

The Chief Registrar feels constrained to advert once more to a misapprehension of the effect of the Trade Union Acts which he finds is still frequent among the working class, the belief that registry under these Acts confers a position and rights similar to those under the Friendly Societies Acts.

In the course of 1876 the Chief Registrar had referred to him by the Home Office a letter from the secretary to a large miners' trade union, asking how it was that the miners were allowed to make rules, and the Registrar to certify them, while such rules were unprotected by the Act under which they were certified? How it was that the trustees of his union could not enforce a rule under which, before a member withdrew, he must pay up arrears and give one month's notice in writing? And how it was that the members could not sue the association for the benefits provided by the rules on sickness, &c., seeing that the rules had been registered and not objected to by the Registrar?

The Chief Registrar had no difficulty in replying: 1st. That in the words of his Report for 1875, 'if a trade union provides by its rules for the matters prescribed in the first schedule to the Act, the Registrar is bound to register the rules, however contrary to law all the other provisions may be;' in other words, that the fact of a trade union being registered affords not the slightest guarantee that any particular rule is legal. Secondly. That the writer's second and third questions were answered by Section 4 of the Act of 1871 itself, which enacts that "nothing in this Act shall enable any Court to entertain any legal proceeding ceeding instituted with the object of directly enforcing or recovering damages for the breach of—(2.) Any agreement for the payment by any person of any subscription or penalty to a trade union; (3.) Any agreement for the application of the funds of a trade union; (a) To provide benefits to members.” So that it is one of the statutory characteristics of a trade union, as contrasted with a friendly society, that its benefits are not enforceable by law.

* This is a purely federative body, whose 531 members are all as many societies.

Report.

It is satisfactory to observe that Mr. George Howell, who has been long and honourably connected with the trades’ union movement, in his “Handy-book of the Labour Laws,” has very clearly pointed out the effect of Section 4 of the Trade Union Act in this respect.

Owing indeed to the passing of the Trade Union Act Amendment Act, 1876, certain rules, previously illegal, which trade unions were in the frequent habit of passing, have been legalised (those in respect of nominations in lieu of wills). There is, however, a rule still of frequent occurrence which the Chief Registrar would point out as likely to be very mischievous, viz., one for the admission of members (“half members,” as they are generally termed) under 16. Section 9 of the Act of 1876, enabling persons between 16 and 21 to be members, unless the rules provide to the contrary, and to “enjoy all the rights of a member,” except as therein provided, and “execute all instruments and give all acquittances necessary to be executed or given under the rules” (except that such persons may not be members of the committee of management, trustees, or treasurers), confers on trade unions one of the most important privileges of friendly societies. Where trade unions go beyond this, and admit infants at an earlier age, they should understand that in so doing they fall under the general law on the subject (rendered more stringent by the Infants’ Relief Act, 1874), which holds infants incapable of contracting except for necessities, and renders “absolutely void” all “accounts stated” with them, which latter term would seem to include all receipts given by them.

The total number of returns received from trades unions for 1875 was 130, out of 215 registered, some of which, however, have ceased to exist. Of the 130, four did not return the number of their members.

The total number of members (of 126 societies) was 277,115.

The total funds, 31st December 1875 (of 130 societies), were 391,595 l.

The total annual income (of 130 societies) was 319,752 l.

It follows from this that the total funds in hand do not greatly exceed one year’s income, and scarcely exceed 1 l. 8 s. per member.

Eleven unions returned over 10,000 members, nine over 10,000 l. funds, and ten over 10,000 l. a year income. Reckoning in the order of magnitude of membership, these were as follows:—

	Members.	Funds.	Income.
National Agricultural Labourers’ Union - - - -	40,000	6,843	12,625
Durham Miners’ Association - - - -	38,000	76,296	44,694

Amalgamated Society of Tailors, Manchester - - -	14,352	14,256	21,418

West Bromwich, &c., District of the Amalgamated Asso- ciation of Miners.	3,105	4,851	10,076

The exceptional wealth of the Steam Engine Makers’ society will be observed. The position of the Miners and Agricultural Labourers unions offers also a strong contrast. It may also be noticed that the 11 societies with over 10,000 members comprised 201,718 out of the 277,115 members returned; that the nine societies with over 10,000 l. funds comprised 298,112 l. out of the 391,595 l. returned; returned; and that the 11 societies with over 10,000*l.* income received 231,981 l. out of the collection income of 319,752 l. These figures show the small comparative importance of all but the largest among these bodies.

It must not be forgotten that a very small proportion of existing trade unions are registered, and that even some of the most considerable among them, such as the Amalgamated Association of Engineers, have not yet sought the benefits of the Act.

XIX.—BUILDING SOCIETIES.

Section 1.—Building Societies in England.

The practice of Benefit Building Societies, with respect to the imposition of fines on members in arrear of the repayments of advances, has been discussed in the law courts in the case of Lovejoy v. Mulkern, before the Master of the Rolls, and on appeal before Lord Coleridge and Lords Justices James and Baggallay. The plaintiff had borrowed 1,400 l. of the society (which is not one incorporated under the Act of 1874) in November 1868, upon the condition that repayments for five years, at 31 l. 10 s. a month, should commence in November 1871, he paying in the meanwhile interest at 7½ per cent. per annum on the loan. On the 1st of November 1871, however, the borrower having failed in payment of the interest, the society took possession of the property. Upon a reference to chambers for an account to be taken of what was due to the society, they claimed 4,687 l., of which 2,939 l. was for fines. According to the rules and tables of the society, fines were chargeable of 6 d. per month for each 50 l. share, increasing to 5 s. per share for six months' default; but no provision was made as to what fines should be payable where the default exceeded six months. The society founded their claim upon the assumption that the fines would increase in the same manner after the six months as provided by the table for the first six months. The Master of the Rolls, however, held that no fines on any share were chargeable beyond the six months, and awarded the society 21 l. 14 s., being 15 s. 6 d. per share for each of 14 shares. Upon appeal, their Lordships varied this order by allowing a fine of 5 s. for each repayment on a share in arrear, making 420 l. In both courts, the proposition that the fines could be carried by inference beyond those expressly provided by the rule was rejected. This case illustrates the wisdom of the provision of the Act of 1874, requiring the rules of Building Societies to set forth "the fines and forfeitures to be imposed on members of the society," and will, it is to be hoped, lead societies to see that the fines so to be imposed are reasonable in amount.

In compliance with an Order of the House of Commons, dated 20 July 1876, a Return was presented, and ordered on the 11th August to be printed, of the Building Societies incorporated up to 31st December 1875, with an abstract of the last statement of accounts furnished by each society. The Return comprised 396 societies, but of those only 272 had furnished annual statements; the others, for the most part, not having reached the time of holding an annual meeting after the date of incorporation. The annual income of 269 of these societies amounted to 7,824,442 l. (exclusive of the balance in bankers' hands at the beginning of the year, and of any sums deposited with bankers and withdrawn in the same year, but inclusive of the balance due to bankers at the end of the year).

The liabilities and assets of 261 societies were as follows:—

Report.

It will be seen that this Return, relating to a period little more than a year after the Building Societies Act, 1874, took effect, gives very partial information as to the extent of the operations of Building Societies generally. A further Return, continuing the information to the 31st December 1876, has been ordered and presented to the House of Commons; and if it should please the House to require similar returns in successive years, there is no doubt that they will steadily increase in value and completeness, and develop the great extent of the Building Society movement.

Much difficulty has been experienced in ascertaining the particulars required for these returns, in consequence of the great variety of forms in which societies draw up their balance-sheets. In the case of Building Societies, the Chief Registrar has not the power, given to him with respect to all the other classes of societies which are subjects of registry, of prescribing the form in which their annual returns shall be made. If the annual statement purports to contain the particulars specified in 37 & 38 Vict. c. 42, s. 40, it has to be accepted. In many cases, however, societies do not distinguish between "subscription," "completed," and "preference" shares. Again, the Statute, as well as the Order of the House of Commons, requires the balance due on mortgage securities to be stated "exclusive of prospective interest," yet many societies openly return as an asset the amount deducted by way of premium when an advance is made, which is clearly prospective interest, while some afford no means of ascertaining how much of the "balance due" is so incorrectly credited as an asset. In all these cases the Registrar has requested the society to furnish a corrected statement, and they have, in most instances, readily done so. Indeed, the number of societies who, in this respect, have disregarded the provisions of the Act under which they are incorporated, is considerably less this year than the year before; and in a few years the balance-sheets of societies will, it is hoped, cease to be open to this objection. It will be seen that the objection is one of principle and not merely of form, for the treating as an asset profit that has not yet been realised is the next step to dividing it, and rendering the society insolvent.

The only cases in which societies have declared their absolute inability to comply with the very salutary requirement of the Act in this respect are those of two societies in Liverpool, the "Harold" and the "Second Marine," managed by a gentlemen of great experience in Building Society matters, Mr. T. E. Priest. These societies are of the "terminating" class, which, notwithstanding the growth of permanent societies, is still in favour in some parts of England. The Second Marine Society has lent 8,664 l. 5 s. to several of its members, upon consideration of their paying 6 l. a year on each of 116½ shares as long as the society lasts, and it is to last until there is money enough to pay all the members who have not borrowed 120 l. per share. The difference between 120 l., the nominal value of a share for each of 116½ shares, or 13,980 l., and the amount actually lent, or 8,664 l. 5 s., which difference amounts to 5,215 l. 15 s., the society calls "premium"; and immediately on making the advance, takes credit for the whole of it as an asset, though at that time it is all "prospective interest." It contends that, as no one can say how long the society may last, it cannot be ascertained at any time how much of the "premium" has yet become realised profit. Upon examination of the rules of the society, however, it appears that there are not less than three ways provided of ascertaining this: first, when a new member enters; second, when a member withdraws; third, when a member redeems a mortgage. In one or other of these ways, at any rate, the financial position of the society might be from time to time ascertained, and the provisions of the Act complied with.

A Bill to amend the Building Societies Act, 1874, a copy of which will be found in Appendix N., has passed through the House of Commons, and is now under the consideration of the House of Lords. It is to be construed as one with the Acts of 1874 and 1875, and its short title is, "The Building Societies Act, 1877" (Section 1).

Section 2 has for its object to remedy a defect in the Act of 1874, which provided no means for changing the chief office or place of meeting, except through an alteration of rules. The Bill enacts that a society may change its chief office in manner directed by the rules, or if there be no such direction, then then at a general meeting specially called for the purpose in the manner set forth by the rules; and that notice of any such change shall be given by the secretary of the society to the Registrar within seven days, and registered, a certificate of registration being given.

Sections 3 and 4 extend the operation of Section 27 of the Act of 1874, the effect of which was to vest on incorporation all rights of action and other rights, estates and interests in real or personal estate belonging to or held in trust for a previously certified society, except stocks and securities in the funds and copyholds or customary estates, not transferable without admittance, but was limited to such estates or interests as were so vested at the commencement of the Act. Under the present Bill all such estates or interests would vest in like manner whenever acquired, on any future incorporation, whilst those acquired since the commencement of the Act of 1874 by societies already incorporated would vest on the passing of the Bill.

The last clause of the Bill is the most peculiar. It gives to a registered notice of a union of societies or transfer of engagements, the force of an effectual conveyance, transfer and assignment of the whole funds, property and assets of the societies uniting to the united society, or of the society transferring its engagements to the society to which such engagements may be transferred, except in the case of stocks in the funds, and estates in copyholds, &c. Whether the registry of such notice is to dispense with any other registration in a register county, in Scotland or Ireland, or under the Registry of Titles Act, is not provided. The effect of the enactment upon the title to property will have to be determined by practice, since there need be nothing on the face of an abstract to show that land mortgaged to a building society by deed had not been effectually conveyed away from it by a mere registered notice.

Section 2.—Building Societies in the Colonies.

By the courtesy of Mr. A. Fayram, the Chief Registrar has been furnished with statistics of the Permanent Building Societies in the province of Ontario, giving the following as the aggregate liabilities and assets of 35 societies at the end of the year 1876:—

The oldest society was established in 1851. The dividends declared range from 6 to 12 per cent.; the rates of interest allowed for money borrowed from 5 to 7 per cent. The largest society is the Canada Permanent Loan and Savings Society (1855), whose total liabilities are 4,883,474 dollars, which is more than twice the amount of the liability of any other society. The loans of that society during the year amounted to 2,008,130 dollars; the total loans of all the societies for the year being 8,573,326 dollars. Three new societies were founded in 1876.

The document from which the foregoing particulars are taken gives also returns voluntarily furnished by six societies in the province of Quebec. Their aggregate liabilities and assets for 1876 are as follows:—

The oldest society was established in 1857. The dividends declared range from 7 to 10 per cent.; the rates of interest allowed for money borrowed from 5 to 6 per cent. The two largest societies are the Compagnie de Pret et Crédit Foncier (1857) with 948,635 dollars, and the Montreal Loan and Mortgage Company (1858) with 849,061 dollars. The latter company lent during the year 473,960 dollars, which exceeds the amount lent by all the others together: the total loans of all the societies for the year being 929,372 dollars.

In the colony of Victoria, as appears from Mr. H. H. Hayter's Victorian year-book for 1876, 61 building societies were in existence in the year 1875, numbering 23,617 members. Their aggregate income was 966,230 l., and their working expenditure, 26,555 l. Sums amounting to 728,172 l. were advanced to members during the year, and 439,288 l. was received on deposit.

These societies are most numerous in the metropolitan counties of Middlesex (132 returns), Surrey (53) and Kent (28), with those of Yorkshire (51), Lancaster (38), and Nottingham (14), no other county sending as many as 10 returns, and the six counties above-named contributing 306 returns out of the 373. They are all small in point of membership, the four largest numbering respectively 610 (Newnham-street, Edgware-road), 529 (Vauxhall Bridge-road), 500 (Bristol), and 425 (Drummond-road, Bermondsey); 27 return over 1,000 l. capital, the largest being one at Bradford, with 8,968 l., one at Bolton-le-Moors, with 7,000 l., and one at Little Bolton, with 6,992 l. The largest amounts circulated, were, by a loan society at Nottingham, with 17 members, 28,200 l., and by one at Birmingham with 392, 26,057 l.

XXII.—SAVINGS BANKS.

Since the date of the last Report, the Savings Bank (Barrister) Bill, referred to in it, has passed into law, under the title of "An Act to amend the Law respecting the Powers and Duties vested in the Barrister appointed to certify the Rules of Savings Banks" (39 & 40 Vict. c. 52).

The effect of this Act is somewhat peculiar. The power of certifying rules, and alterations or amendments of rules of savings banks, and the powers and duties relating to disputes, are transferred to and vested in the Registrar, as defined by the Friendly Societies Act, 1875, i.e., for England, the Central Office, for Scotland and Ireland, the Assistant Registrars for those respective countries. It is then provided that, "every person to whom any power or duty of the barrister appointed to certify the rules of saving banks is transferred by this Act, shall, for the purpose of the exercise of such power or duty, and of the enactments relating thereto, have the same powers and authorities as and be deemed to be the barrister appointed to certify the rules of savings banks; but any such power or duty which is vested in the said registrar, when exercised or performed by the Assistant Registrar for Scotland or Ireland, shall be so exercised or performed, subject to the direction of the Chief Registrar, in the Friendly Societies Act, 1875, mentioned."

As by Section 10 of the Friendly Societies Act, 1875, the Chief Registrar and Assistant Registrars for England constitute the Central Office, it would seem to follow that whilst the Assistant Registrar for England is, for the purposes of the Savings Bank (Barrister) Act, 1876, placed absolutely on the same footing as the Chief Registrar, the Assistant Registrars for Scotland and Ireland, on the contrary, are placed in a position of absolute subordination to him, such as they occupy under no other Act.

An Act of some importance affecting savings banks, certified under the Act of 1873, the "Bankers' Books Evidence Act, 1876" (39 & 40 Vict. c. 48), was passed shortly after the date of the last Report, and will be found in Appendix O. Under Section 3 of this, "the entries in ledgers, day-books, cash-books, and other account-books of any bank" (which by Section 2 includes any savings bank certified as before mentioned), are admissible in all legal proceedings as prima facie evidence of the matters, transactions, and accounts recorded therein, on proof being given by the affidavit in writing of one of the managers or officers of such bank, or by other evidence, that such ledgers, day-books, cash-books, or other account books, are, or have been, the ordinary books of such bank, and that the said entries have been made in usual and ordinary course of business, and that such books are in or come immediately from the custody or control of such bank." But, "nothing in this clause contained shall apply to any legal proceeding to which any bank, whose ledgers, day-books, cash-books, and other account books may be required to be produced as evidence, shall be a party."

Since in all savings banks disputes the bank is a party, it would follow from the concluding sentence in the above section that the entries in its books are not evidence in such proceedings, and since the entries themselves are not evidence, it would follow that Section 4, which provides that, "copies of all entries in any ledgers, day-books, cash-books, or other account-books used by any such bank, may be proved in all legal proceedings as evidence of such entries without production of the originals, by means of the affidavit of a person who has examined the same, stating the fact of said examination, and that the copies sought to be put in evidence are correct," is equally inapplicable to proceedings on reference to the Registrar.

From the 11th August, the date of the passing of the Savings Bank (Barrister) Act, 1876, to the end of the year 1876, 10 awards were made by the Central Office under the Post Office Savings Banks Acts, and four under the Trustee Savings Bank Act of 1863. The number of disputes disposed of was, however, far greater, since three of the former class of awards dealt with no less than 20 different disputes, all between a trade union (the National Amalgamated Society of Ironworkers) and various of its branches. Only seven actual hearings took place, the other matters being disposed of on statutory declarations. In one or two cases the claims made were so palpably baseless that the Registrar declined to proceed to a hearing upon them.

One subject of dispute during the past year, which is of frequent recurrence, has been the operation of Section 104 of the Pauper Lunatics Act, 16 & 17 Vict. c. 97, which enacts that—

"If it appear to any justice or persons by this Act authorised to make any order for the "payment of money for the maintenance of any lunatic, that such lunatic has an estate,
 "real or personal, applicable to his maintenance, and more than sufficient to maintain "his family, if any, he or they shall, by an order under his or their hand and seal, or hands
 "and seals, direct the overseers of the parish, or a relieving officer of the parish or union,
 "or the treasurer, or some other officer of the county to which such lunatic is chargeable,
 "or in which any property of the lunatic may be, or an officer of the asylum in which "the lunatic may be, to seize so much of any money, and to seize and sell so much of the "goods and chattels, and to take and receive so much of the rents and profits of the lands "and tenements of such lunatic, and other income of such lunatic, as may be necessary to "pay the charges of the examination, bringing before a justice or justices, removal,
 "lodging, maintenance, clothing, medicine and care of such lunatic, accounting for the "same to such justice or justices, such charges having been first proved to the satisfaction
 "of such justice or justices, and the amount set forth in such order; and if any trustee
 "or other person having the possession, custody, or charge of any property of such "lunatic, or if the Governor and Company of the Bank of England, or any other body or "person having in their or his hands, any stock, interest, dividend, or annuity belonging
 "or due to such lunatic, pay any money according to any such order, or pay any money
 "without any such order, to the guardians of any union or parish, or to any overseer of "any parish not in a union or under a board of guardians, or to the treasurer of any "county, or any other officer of any county authorised to receive the same, to defray the "charges

"charges paid or incurred by or on behalf of such parish, union, or county, for the examination, bringing before a justice or justices, removal, lodging, maintenance, clothing, medicine, and care of such lunatic, the receipt of the person authorised to receive such money under such order, or of such guardians, overseer, or treasurer, or other officer, shall be a good discharge to such trustee, governor, and company, or other body or person as aforesaid."

On the best consideration that the Central Office have been able to give to the above enactment, it appears to them only to apply during the life and lunacy (which would include the time of discharge on trial under Section 79) of the lunatic, and that consequently orders of justices made after his death or unconditional discharge for the purposes of the section have no binding effect, nor is the receipt of the person authorised by the order, the guardians, &c., in such case a discharge to the trustees of a certified savings bank or to the Post Office.

An important opinion has been given by the law officers of the Crown on a point on which the Central Office had ventured to depart from previous practice, in holding that a husband surviving an intestate wife was entitled, without administration, to her deposits made since the Married Women's Property Act, as well as to those made before that Act. On the ground that such deposits are choses in action, the law officers held to the contrary view. The course thus taken, although in accordance with precedent, may perhaps involve an extension of the doctrine of choses in action, since it is characteristic of savings bank deposits (see Crisp v. Bunbury, 8 Bing. 394), that they are not the subject of proceedings in the Superior Courts, with the single exception, introduced by the Married Women's Property Act itself, of a claim inter vivos, made by the husband on the ground that the deposit was made by means of his moneys without his consent. The point affords indeed an instance, perhaps not the only one, in which the effect of the Married Women's Property Act has been, probably without the intention of its framers, to alter the law relating to married women's property to the detriment of the husband, without any corresponding benefit to the wife.

XXIII.—RAILWAY SAVINGS BANKS.

The operations of these institutions have been extending considerably of late years. A Parliamentary Return, known as Mr. Macdonald's Return, shows that whilst in 1867 there were six of them (one divided into two branches), which had together 1,933 members, and received during the year 31,364*l.* in deposits, in 1876 there were nine of them (one still divided into two branches), as follows, viz. :—

The increase in members is thus a little more than fourfold in ten years, the increase of yearly deposits nearly fivefold. The return does not show the total amounts due to depositors. As these banks represent, from the public point of view, virtual extensions of the borrowing powers of the companies, these figures would be of importance.

Since in some way or other the Acts relating to these institutions generally invite some action on the part of the Registry Office, the Chief Registrar thinks it right to point out that their position is, in many respects, very anomalous.

The Legislature has imposed upon ordinary Savings Banks the most jealous safeguards. The treasurers, trustees, and managers, are prohibited from receiving "any salary, allowance, profit, or benefit whatsoever" from the management, beyond actual expenses. The audit of accounts is provided for, as well as the comparison of each depositor's book, with the list of balances by their distinctive numbers. Weekly returns of transactions are to be returned to the National Debt Commissioners. All officers in receipt or custody of money are bound to give security. Officers failing to account for receipts are made guilty of misdemeanour. The deposits, except such as are otherwise invested on the responsibility of the individual depositors, are all paid into the hands of the National Debt Commissioners, to whom annual statements, duly attested and countersigned, are to be transmitted, under penalty of publication in the "Gazette," and who have power to require detailed statements of the expenses of management, as well as to close accounts for any neglect or refusal to send annual statements, or to obey any orders or directions given pursuant to the Act.

In Railway Savings Banks, on the other hand, the whole money is placed in the hands of the companies, which virtually manage the institutions, without any check other than such as may be imposed upon them by their private Acts. The security of the depositors is generally, if not invariably, postponed to all loans authorised by Parliament to be raised by the respective companies, sometimes to all debts. It may be said, in fact, that any company which obtains Parliamentary permission to establish such a Savings Bank is thereby enabled, in addition to whatever sums it is specifically authorised by Parliament to borrow on certain specified securities, to obtain as much more money as it can from its own servants and their families, without any security at all.

Yet, in every instance, the Chief Registrar believes the companies have obtained from Parliament privileges which ordinary Savings Banks only enjoy under the stringent conditions above mentioned, such as the receipt of money from infants and married women.

Report.

In his Report for 1874, the present Chief Registrar, then Registrar for England, pointed out that rules of such Savings Banks were submitted to the Registrar for approval under Acts of which he had no notice before they were passed. In the course of the present Session, the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury were good enough to forward to him and request his observations upon four Bills containing provisions relating to the above subject, viz., those of the Midland Railway Company, North British Railway Company, Metropolitan District Railway Company, and Metropolitan Railway Company. In the first three, Railway Savings Banks were proposed to be established for the first time; in the last, extension was sought for an existing institution. The clauses followed the objectionable precedents of previous enactments in making the rules of the proposed banks dependent on the "approval" generally of the Registrar, thus rendering him responsible not only for the legality of such rules, but for their existence, and thereby, in a manner, for the whole management of the institutions themselves; whilst they recalled into existence a clause as to deposits by married women in the Savings Bank Act of 1863, which has for the last seven years been superseded by Section 2 of the Married Women's Property Act. The Chief Registrar recommended a clause for adoption which should provide for the auditing of accounts, the balancing of accounts once a year, the sending yearly returns to the Registrar, the supplying to all depositors on demand copies of rules at a price not to exceed 6*d.*, and copies of the annual return gratuitously, for keeping a copy of the last annual return, with the auditors' report, if any, always hung up conspicuously at the office of the Savings Bank, for giving notice to the Registrar within 14 days of changes of office and of trustees; confining the Registrar's responsibility for the rules to the points of their conformity to law and to the particular section; applying Section 2 of the Married Women's Property Act to deposits; limiting to 16 the minimum age at which minor depositors can execute instruments and give acquittances; giving a power of nomination for sums under 50*l.*, or in default of nomination, of distribution by the trustees, and fixing a penalty for the failure to give the required notices, send the required returns, &c., and certain fees (payable to the Exchequer) for the proceedings of the Registrar in respect to such institutions.

The proposed clause has been substantially accepted by the three first-named companies. The Metropolitan Railway Company, on the other hand, sooner than accept, or even consider, a similar clause, adapted to the circumstance of its own being only for the extension of an existing institution, withdrew its clause altogether.*

A copy of the clause as contained in the Midland Railway (New Works, &c.) Act, 1877 (40 & 41 Vict. c. LII.), is as follows:—

Company may
banks.

40. With respect to any savings banks to be established by the company, the following provisions shall apply:—

(1.) The company may establish a savings bank or savings banks, with or without branches, at such of the stations on their railways as they may think fit, and may thereat receive by way of deposit from any of their officers, clerks, servants, workmen, or apprentices, or from the officers, clerks, servants, workmen, or apprentices of any other company, working or using the undertaking of the company, and from the husbands, wives, children, fathers, mothers, brothers or sisters, nephews or nieces, or wards, being minors, of such officers, clerks, servants, workmen or apprentices, any money at interest.

(2.) Every such deposit, with the interest thereon, shall be a charge on the net profits of the company's undertaking next after the mortgage and other debts of the company and the interest on their debenture stock.

(3.) Two copies of the rules of any such savings bank, and of every amendment of the same from time to time (the term amendment to include a new rule and the cancelling of a rule), under the hands of three of the directors and of the secretary of

* The Chief Registrar is sorry to have to point out that a preamble has been prefixed by this company to the rules of their savings bank, as certified by his predecessor in 1874, which is entirely misleading. "The directors," it begins, "have established amongst you a provident savings bank, which, being under the authority of an Act of Parliament, affords the most perfect security to the depositors." The security is that of the deposits being charged on the net profits of the company's undertaking next after any debt or money which they owe or are liable to pay at the passing of this Act, and any money for the time being borrowed by them; in other words, a purely contingent one.

of the company, shall be sent to the Registrar of Friendly Societies (as defined by the Friendly Societies Act, 1875).

(4.) Such rules shall contain provisions—

- (a.) For the management of the savings bank, and for the chief office of the same.
- (b.) If thought fit, for the appointment and discharge of trustees.
- (c.) For the payment in and the withdrawal of deposits, the rate of interest thereon, and the payment of such interest.
- (d.) For the keeping and auditing of accounts.
- (e.) For the balancing of accounts once a year at least, and the sending, on or before the 1st April in every year, to the Registrar of Friendly Societies, a general statement (to be called the Annual Return) of the receipts and expenditure, funds and effects, of the savings bank, as audited, made out to the 31st December then last, inclusively, with a copy of the auditor's report, if any.
- (f.) For supplying every depositor on demand with a copy of the rules for the time being, at a price not exceeding 6 d., and with a copy of the annual return gratuitously.
- (g.) For keeping a copy of the last annual return, with the auditor's report, if any, always hung up in a conspicuous place at the office of the savings bank.
- (h.) For giving notice within 14 days to the Registrar of any change in the chief office, and of the appointment of any new trustees.

(5.) The Registrar, on being satisfied that the rules or that any amendment of rules of a savings bank are or is in conformity with law and with the provisions of this section, shall issue to the company an acknowledgment of registry of such savings bank, or of such amendment of rules, which shall be conclusive evidence that such savings bank or such amendment of rules are or is duly registered.

(6.) The rules, when so registered, shall be binding on the company and its officers, and on the depositors and their executors, administrators and nominees. Unless otherwise provided, the company shall be deemed to be the trustees of any savings bank established by them.

(7.) Deposits may, if the rules so allow, be received from or on account of married women, and section 2 of the Married Women's Property Act, 1870, shall apply to all such deposits.

(8.) Deposits may, if the rules so allow, be received from or on behalf of infants, and infants above the age of 16 years may execute all instruments, and give all acquittances necessary to be executed or given under the rules; but all instruments and acquittances relating to the deposits of infants under the age of 16 shall be executed or made by their parents or guardians.

(9.) A depositor above the age of 16 may by writing under his hand, sent to the office of the savings bank, nominate any person to whom his deposits, not exceeding 50 l., shall be paid at his decease, and may from time to time in like manner revoke or vary such nomination.

(10.) The deposits, not exceeding 50 l., of a person who dies intestate, and without having made any nomination under this section which remains unrevoked at his death, may be paid without letters of administration to the person who appears to the trustees, or a majority of the trustees, upon such evidence as they may deem satisfactory, to be entitled by law to receive the same.

(11.) Sections 9, 10, 44, 45, 46, 48, and 49 of the Act of the twenty-sixth and twenty-seventh Victoria, chapter eighty-seven, to consolidate and amend the laws relating to savings banks, as amended by the Savings Bank Barrister Act, 1876, shall apply to every savings bank herein mentioned.

(12.) If the trustees or officers of a savings bank fail to give any notice, send any document or return, or to do anything which the savings bank is hereby required to do, or make a return, or wilfully furnish information to the Registrar in any respect false or insufficient, or otherwise act contrary to the provisions of this section, they shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding 5 l., recoverable at the suit of any person aggrieved, or of the Chief or any Assistant Registrar of Friendly Societies, in a court of summary jurisdiction, and in manner directed by the Summary Jurisdiction Acts as defined respectively in the Friendly Societies Act, 1875.

(13.) Section 39 of the Friendly Societies Act, 1875, shall apply to any instrument or document, copy or extract of an instrument or document, to be executed or issued by a Registrar for the purposes of this section. A copy of the rules under the seal of the company shall also be evidence of such rules.

(14). The following fees shall be payable to the Registrar for matters to be transacted under the provisions of this section, and shall be paid by such Registrar into the receipt of Her Majesty's Exchequer:—

For the acknowledgment of registry of a savings bank, and of every amendment of rules of the same	1	1	-
For the determination of a Registrar on a dispute	1	1	-
And if more than one hearing or adjournment become necessary, then 1 l. 1 s. more for every hearing after the first, and for every adjournment.
For every document required to be signed by a Registrar or to bear the seal of the Central Office (as defined by the Friendly Societies Act, 1875), not chargeable with any other fee to the Registrar	-	2	6
For every inspection on the same day of documents (whether one or more) in the custody of the Registrar, relating to one and the same savings bank	-	1	-
For every copy or extract of any document in the custody of the Registrar not exceeding two hundred and sixteen words	-	1	-
And if exceeding that number, 4 d. per folio of seventy-two words (in addition to the fee, if any, for the signature of a Registrar, or seal of the Central Office).*

The Chief Registrar ventures to think that the time has come when the adoption of similar provisions should be required in all cases where institutions of the kind exist. Without contesting the benefits which such institutions confer upon the depositors by the allowance of a higher rate of interest than is obtainable from either trustee or Post Office Savings Banks, still less the benevolent motives which may have inspired their creation, the Chief Registrar would also suggest whether, considering the position in life of the depositors in these institutions, and the entirely contingent character of the profits of a railway company, the claims of such depositors upon the funds of the companies their debtors should not be made preferential instead of being postponed to those of all other creditors.

XXIV.—SUMMARY OF ANNUAL RETURNS.

It may be interesting to group together the results of the returns sent to the Central Office from the five groups of societies from which it receives them, viz., societies under the Friendly Societies' Acts, Industrial and Provident Societies, Trade Unions, Building Societies under the Act of 1874, and Loan Societies.

Imperfect though the above figures may be, yet as representing to a great extent the results of provident habits in the working class, they deserve to be taken into account by politicians and moralists as well as statist.

SCOTLAND.

REPORT by the ASSISTANT REGISTRAR of FRIENDLY SOCIETIES for Scotland to the CHIEF REGISTRAR of FRIENDLY SOCIETIES, for the Year 1876.

In terms of Section 10, Sub-section 8 (e) of the Friendly Societies Act, 1875, the Assistant Registrar for Scotland has the honour to submit the following Report for last year to the Chief Registrar:—

FRIENDLY SOCIETIES.

During the year, eight new Friendly Societies were registered, viz.:—

Golden Willow Lodge of Free Gardeners.
Greenock Rafters' Friendly.
Edinburgh Carters and Porters.
Barrwood Permanent Benefit.
Edinburgh, Leith and District Millers.
Port of Leith Carters and Porters.
Lochgelly Olive Lodge of Free Gardeners.
Inverness Male and Female Yearly.

Complete amendments of the rules of six, and partial amendments of the rules of eighteen societies, were registered.

One society, the "Glasgow Western Juvenile Foresters' Sick and Funeral," changed its name, under Section 24 of the Act, by the omission of the word "Western."

Five societies were dissolved, under Section 25, by instrument of dissolution, setting forth the mode of appropriation or division of the funds, and the dissolutions were advertised, as provided by the Act, in the "Edinburgh Gazette," and in a local newspaper selected by each society.

The mode of appropriation of the funds of the Tain Guildry deserves special attention, as forming a notable contrast to the usual method of division among the members.

The following are the societies dissolved as above, viz.:—

1. Guildry Society of Tain (No. 3, Ross-shire), certified 10th June 1833; number of members, 2; funds, 2,402 l. There were six widows of members entitled to annuities of 5 l. 5 s. each. The two surviving members of the society renounced all claim upon the funds, and agreed to the formation of a trust, the annual income derived from which should be applied as follows, viz.: "After paying necessary expenses of management, to payment of the annuities to which the said widows are entitled as aforesaid, with an additional yearly sum of 4 l. 15 s. to each of them; secondly, to payment of an annual sum, not exceeding 10 l., for keeping in creditable condition the old church and churchyard of Tain, being the burial place of most of the deceased members of the society; and thirdly, to payment of a life annuity of 10 l. to each of as many ladies, to be from time to time nominated by the trustees, whose parents or husbands were resident in Tain, as the said annual income, after meeting the said prior charges, will afford."

2. Dundee Shipwrights' Friendly (No. 56, Forfarshire); certified 17th August 1874. Number of members, 60; funds, 59 l. 8 s. 4 d. The balance, after paying debts amounting to 6 l. 0 s. 6 d., to be divided among the members.

3. Brotherly Society of St. Monance (No. 2, Fifeshire); certified 11th April 1834. Number of members, 24; funds, 185 l. 2 s. 6 d.; liabilities, 4 l. 2 s. 6 d. Balance divided among members, their wives, and widows.

4. Portglasgow Shipwrights' Benefit (No. 96, Renfrewshire); certified 5th December 1873. Number of members, 35; assets, 52 l. 15 s. 5 d.; liabilities, 17 s. 4 d. Balance divided.

5. Riccarton Munificent Friendly (No. 25, Ayrshire). Established 1815; certified 4th February 1835; number of members, 52; funds, 1,595 l., divided.

Report.

One society was dissolved by award of the Registrar, under Section 25, Sub-section 8, viz.:—

Brechin Benevolent Society or Lodge of Oddfellows (No. 1, Forfarshire); certified 22nd October 1829.

Five-sixths of the members of this society applied for an investigation into its affairs with a view to dissolution. The number of members was 139. It was stated that “the income of the society was trifling, and that the great bulk of the “expenditure had for many years fallen on the accumulated fund.” After investigation, an award of dissolution was made by the Assistant Registrar, on the report of the Actuary to the Central Office finding that “the present rates of “contribution, bearing in mind the present available assets of the society, will “certainly be insufficient to cover the benefit assured,” and providing a scheme of division of the assets, 154 l. 7 s. 11 d., among the members.

Intimations have been received of the irregular dissolutions of the following 15 societies:—

1. Journeymen Blacksmiths' Friendly and Union (No. 6, Lanarkshire); established 1824; certified 8th May 1830. “Dissolved.”

2. Covenanters' Tent, 224, of the Independent Order of Rechabites (No. 27, Dumfriesshire); certified 8th September 1874. “Out of existence in 1876.”

3. Wishawtown Friendly (No. 228, Lanarkshire); certified 20th March 1846. “Went down for want of funds.”

4. Langloan Pin Friendly (No. 123, Lanarkshire); certified 3rd August 1836. “Funds done in February 1876.”

5. Drumpellier Coalhewers' Friendly (No. 187, Lanarkshire); certified 10th July 1841. “Funds done 20 years since.”

6. Male and Female Yearly Society at House of Peter Gillies (No. 203, Edinburghshire); certified 8th July 1861. “Ceased 14 years ago.”

7. Strathaven St. Andrew's Lodge (No. 3, Lanarkshire); certified 28th November 1829. “Dissolved in 1862.”

8. Greenock Catholic Young Men's Association (No. 57, Renfrewshire); certified 19th June 1857. “Not in existence this eight or nine years as a benefit society.”

9. Langloan Benevolent (No. 7, Dumfriesshire); established 1789; certified 10th May 1850. “Broken up more than 10 years ago.”

10. Thistle Division of United Order of Sons of Temperance, 197 (No. 362, Lanarkshire); certified 22nd September 1868. “Dissolved in 1870.”

11. Young Journeymen Weavers of Gorbals (No. 137, Lanarkshire); established 1763; certified 8th July 1837. “Dissolved in 1849.”

12. Robertson's Lodge of Free and Accepted Masons (No. 2, Cromarty); certified 12th August 1832. “Dissolved in 1870.”

13. Ardrossan Friendly (No. 9, Ayrshire); certified 12th January 1832. “Dissolved in 1858 or 1859.”

14. Edinburgh Holy Guild of St. Joseph (No. 163, Edinburghshire); certified 22nd January 1845. “Ceased to exist at least nine years ago.”

15. Operative Tailors' Benefit (No. 122, Edinburghshire); certified 16th February 1836. “Broken up years previous to 1856.”

Eight societies, registered in England, recorded their rules in Scotland, so as to entitle them to the privileges of the Act in this country, and two of these subsequently recorded amendments, viz.:—

Liverpool Victoria Legal,
Royal Liver.
Independent Order of Rechabites.
Independent Order of Oddfellows, Manchester Unity.
Nottingham Order of Oddfellows.
National Division of the Sons of Temperance.
Catholic Benefit.
Ancient Order of Foresters.

Notices of appointments of trustees were received from 252, and of change of registered office from 191 societies.

Form

Forms for the annual return were sent to 834 societies. Returns have been received from 482 societies, and 86 forms have been sent back by the Dead Letter Office, thus showing a decrease in the number of failures to make the return animadverted on in last year's Report. The remark then made as to the unsatisfactory condition of many of the returns furnished, necessitating their being sent back to the societies for completion or explanation, again applies.

The small number of new societies registered is somewhat startling. One reason for this may possibly be that people are deterred from forming new societies, partly on account of the numerous provisions required by the Act and Treasury Regulations to be inserted in the rules, as well as on account of the strict requirements of the Act with regard to returns, valuations, certificates of death, &c., and partly in consequence of a vague impression that these requirements are more numerous, and imply a larger amount of Government interference and control than is really the case. It is not, for instance, an uncommon idea that the employment of a public auditor is compulsory. Evidence of the existence of the feeling indicated may be found in the applications which are received from registered societies to have their registry cancelled, the avowed object being to escape from the obligations imposed by the Act. Such applications, it is hardly necessary to say, are refused.

Out of 46 applications for registry of new societies received during the year, only eight, as has been said, were registered. Of the remainder, a few have been registered during the current year; others, after their rules had been carefully revised by the Assistant Registrar, either formally withdrew the application, or did not proceed further in the matter; while others, which were connected with Orders, on finding that their subordination to the Order could not be recognised if they were registered as "societies," postponed registry until such time as the Orders, by recording in Scotland, should enable them to be registered as "branches."

Only two branches were registered during the year; one, a new district of Nottingham Oddfellows, the other being a conversion into a "branch" under the Amendment Act of a court of Foresters previously registered as a separate "society." The Assistant Registrar is glad, however, to be able to report that there is at present greater activity in the registering of new branches, and conversion of registered societies into branches. Most of these are in connection with the Ancient Order of Foresters, which recently had its headquarters for a year in Edinburgh, a fact probably not without its bearing on the activity alluded to.

The registering of new societies still proceeds slowly, but the Assistant Registrar hopes that when the working of the new Act is better understood, the condition of matters will improve; and it is but fair to remember that the greater strictness of the present law doubtless exercises a salutary check against the reckless formation of societies. It should also be borne in mind that a large proportion of what would formerly have been registered as "societies" will, under the new system, figure only as "branches."

The Assistant Registrar's attention having been called to the fact that an unregistered yearly society in Ayrshire was in the habit of making payments on the death of children under 10 years of age without the production of a certificate of death, he communicated with the society on the subject, and received the assurance that the provisions of Section 28 of the Act should, for the future, be complied with. The Forfar unregistered yearly societies, on the other hand, are said to continue to make such payments under colour of "discretionary charity," relying on a decision in the Sheriff Court in their favour, referred to in last year's Report. In connexion with this subject, it may be noted that Dr. J. B. Russell, Medical Officer for Glasgow, in his "Remarks" accompanying the Mortality Tables for that city, comments on the striking diminution in the number of uncertified deaths in Glasgow during the year 1876, a fact which he does not hesitate to attribute to the operation of the Friendly Societies Act.

The Registrar General of Births, Deaths, and Marriages for Scotland has recently issued fresh instructions to the Registrars throughout the country, containing provisions having reference to the Friendly Societies and Trades Union Amendment Acts.

Complaints are made against one of the collecting societies that the collectors defeat the intention of Section 30, sub-section 5, of the principal Act, by their presence at the meetings of the society and interference in the election of office bearers, and the same society is also alleged to evade the provisions of the Act with regard to transfers of members from other societies. The return of one society contained an entry, "penalty for infringing Act, 2*l.*," which, on inquiry, was explained to refer to a neglect of the provisions as to transfers. A complete amendment of rules of another society of this class was in dependence before the Assistant Registrar for six months, involving repeated interviews and a tedious correspondence, and eliciting a threat of appeal from refusal to register before the society yielded to the points insisted on by the Registrar.

The Assistant Registrar is informed that the treasurer of a court of Foresters has been sentenced to six months' imprisonment for embezzling the funds of the court to the extent of 77*l.* 1*s.* 6*d.* Another case has been brought under his notice in which the secretary of a society was alleged to have failed to enter in his books, or to account for various sums received by him. The society applied to the Procurator Fiscal to prosecute the defaulter, but he declined to take any steps until supplied with further information. Application was then made to the Assistant Registrar, who referred the society to Section 16, sub-section 9, of the Act under which proceedings might be taken, but he has not heard if effect was given to the suggestion. Cases such as these should tend to convince societies of the advantages of the regular audit and annual return enjoined by the Friendly Societies Act, as well as of many of the obligations and privileges introduced by it.

The following gentlemen have been appointed Public Auditors for the current year under the Friendly Societies' and the Industrial and Provident Societies' Acts:

James Meston, Esq., 75, Union-street, Aberdeen, for the district, including the counties of Aberdeen, Banff and Kincardine.

Charles M. Prentice, Esq., Castle-street, Edinburgh, for the district, including the counties of Edinburgh, Linlithgow, Haddington, Peebles, Selkirk, Roxburgh and Berwick.

D. S. Carson, Esq., 161, Hope-street, Glasgow, for the counties of Lanark, Renfrew, Dumbarton, Argyle and Bute.

R. Moody Stuart, Esq., 31, Bank-street, Dundee, for the county of Forfar.

The public valuers appointed for Scotland are James Meikle, Esq., actuary of the Scottish Provident Institution, Edinburgh, and Charles M. Prentice, Esq., chartered accountant and actuary, who are also authorized to certify annuities.

INDUSTRIAL AND PROVIDENT (CO-OPERATIVE) SOCIETIES.

During the year 10 new societies were registered, viz. :—

1. Don Co-operative Society, Limited, Port Elphinstone, Kintore, Aberdeenshire.
2. Dreghorn Co-operative Society, Limited, Co-operative Buildings, Dreghorn, Irvine, Ayrshire.
3. Juniper Green Co-operative Society, Limited, Juniper Green, Edinburghshire.
4. Strathkinnes Co-operative Society, Limited, Strathkinnes, Fifeshire.
5. Free Trade Saving Society, Limited, 151, East High-street, Forfar.
6. Strathaven Manufacturing Co-operative Society, Limited, Commercial-road, Strathaven, Lanarkshire.
7. Bridgeton Old Victualling and Baking Society, Limited, 147, Main-street, Bridgeton, Glasgow.
8. Rutherglen New Co-operative Victualling and Baking Society, Limited, 32, Main-street, Rutherglen, Lanarkshire.
9. Whifflet Co-operative Society, Limited, Hamilton-road, Whifflet, Lanarkshire.
10. Grangemouth Co-operative Building and Investment Society, Limited, Grange-place, Grangemouth, Stirlingshire.

Seventeen societies had alterations of rules certified.

One society, the Auchterarder Co-operative Society, Limited," obtained certificate of change of name to the "Auchterarder Feus Co-operative Society, Limited."

Two societies, the "Deanston Co-operative Society, Limited," and the "Forfar

“Forfar Equitable Co-operative Society, Limited,” certified under the Act of 1852, received certificates of registration under the Act of 1867.

The dissolutions of four societies were intimated by letter, viz. :

Bridgeton Old Victualling and Baking Society, Limited, certified 23rd November 1865.

Dumfries Co-operative Meat Supplying Society, Limited, certified 25th January 1875.

Ardwell Co-operative Society, Limited, certified 26th April 1869.

Ecclefechan Co-operative Society, Limited, certified 6th May 1873.

Three societies are in course of being wound up under the Companies Act as applied by the Industrial and Provident Societies Act, 1876, viz. :

Linlithgowbridge Co-operative Society, Limited.

Fullarton Co-operative Iron Company, Limited.

Galashiels Cobden Co-operative Store Company, Limited.

Forms for the Annual Return were issued to 289 societies. Returns have been received from 231 societies, and 10 forms have been sent back through the Dead Letter Office.

BUILDING SOCIETIES.

During the year six societies under 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 32, and three new societies received certificates of incorporation under the Building Societies Act, 1874.

Eight societies received certificates of complete, and two of partial alterations of rules, and one of change of name under the Act of 1874.

One union of two societies was registered under Section 33 of the Act of 1874.

The Registrar is desirous of calling the attention of “Building Societies” to the fact that neither the holding of land, nor the erection of buildings by a society itself are recognised as among the purposes of such societies under the Act of William IV. or the Acts of 1874 and 1875. Both the old and the new Acts contemplate merely the advancing of money by a society to its members on heritable security with the view of enabling the members to purchase or build for themselves.

TRADE UNIONS.

No trade unions were registered during the year. One received certificate of complete, and two of partial, alterations of rules.

Two trade unions, viz.: “The Boiler Makers and Iron Shipbuilders,” and “The Amalgamated Society of Carpenters and Joiners,” registered in England, recorded their rules in Scotland, under Section 6 of the Trade Union Amendment Act, 1876.

Forms for the Annual Return were issued to 24 trade unions, and 10 returns have been received.

Although, strictly speaking, under Section 17 of the Trade Union Act, 1871, the registrar for each country should present an Annual Report separately to Parliament, the Assistant Registrar of Friendly Societies for Scotland, as registrar of trade unions for that country, looking to the paucity of his transactions in the latter capacity, would be obliged by the Chief Registrar of Friendly Societies allowing the Report on Trade Unions for Scotland, like that for Ireland, to be presented through him.

Report.

Notwithstanding the decrease in the number of certificates granted to the various classes of societies in Scotland during 1876, as compared with previous recent years, the correspondence of the Assistant Registrar's Office has undergone no diminution. The number of letters, &c. (excluding returns, but including trustee notices and changes of registered office) received during the year, was 2,526, and the number despatched, 2,619.

APPENDIX (B.)

CONDITIONS FOR THE APPOINTMENT OF PUBLIC AUDITORS.

Appendix (B.)

CONDITIONS under which Public Auditors will hold their Appointments under the Friendly Societies Acts, and the Industrial and Provident Societies Act, 1876.

1. The country will be divided into districts, and public auditors for each district appointed.

2. The public auditor is bound to accept for audit (except as hereinafter mentioned) the accounts of any society within his district which applies to him (the term "society" to include a branch of a society), at the scale of fees hereafter mentioned, the society complying with the terms of these instructions. But no public auditor can audit the accounts, balance-sheet, or annual return of any society of which he is accountant, or any account, balance-sheet, or annual return which he has himself prepared.

3. A society desirous of submitting its accounts to a public auditor must forward all the necessary materials to his office or place of residence, in order to save travelling expenses and loss of time. It will be the duty of the auditor, when applied to, to impress this upon the society. He is not bound to leave his office for the purpose of the audit.

4. The society must, at the same time, forward to the auditor the annual return or general statement of the receipts and expenditure, funds and effects, of the society, made up in the form for the time being required under the Friendly Societies Act, 1875, or the Industrial and Provident Societies Act, 1876, as the case may be.

5. The auditor is to verify the annual return with the accounts and vouchers relating thereto, and either to sign the same as found by him to be correct, duly vouched, and in accordance with law, or specially to report to the society in what respects he finds it incorrect, unvouched, or not in accordance with law.

6. The work of the auditor will be strictly confined to auditing, but he has, under the Acts, a right of access to all the books and accounts of the society. In the event of his discovering errors in the annual return, or the books, accounts, or vouchers submitted to him, they are to be returned (at the cost of the society) for correction, unless the auditor be requested by the society to correct the inaccuracies, in which case he is entitled to claim an additional fee, to be arranged between him and the society.

7. The auditor shall, in all cases, make a report to the society upon the accounts and other documents submitted to him, and, in case he has called for explanations or information from the directors or committee of management, he shall state whether such explanations or information have been given, and whether they have been satisfactory.

8. Rates of payment:—

(1.) For auditing the accounts of Friendly Societies the scale of payment shall be—

	£.	s.	d.
For societies consisting of not more than 100 members -	1	1	-
For societies with over 100 members, but not exceeding 500 members, in respect of each 100 members or part thereof - - - - -	1	1	-
For societies consisting of over 500 members, in respect of the first 500 members - - - - -	5	5	-

With an additional 10 s. 6 d. in respect of each additional 100 members or part thereof. No fee, however, to exceed 52 l. 10 s., unless by special arrangement.

Appendix (B.)

(2.) For auditing the accounts of Industrial and Provident Societies, the scale of payment shall be—

	£.	s.	d.
For societies whose total sales do not exceed 2,000 l. per annum - - - - -	1	1	-
For societies whose total sales exceed 2,000 l. , but do not exceed 10,000 l. per annum , in respect of each 2,000 l. or fraction thereof -	1	1	-
For societies whose total sales exceed 10,000 l. , but do not exceed 25,000 l. per annum , in respect of the first 10,000 l. - - - - -	5	5	-
With an additional 10 s. 6 d. in respect of each additional 2,000 l. or fraction thereof.

Where the sales exceed 25,000 l. per annum, the fee to be fixed by special arrangement.

The word "sales" in the case of societies for the buying and selling of land to include instalments in repayment of advances.

9. The scales of fees apply only in cases where the society is located within the district assigned to the auditor employed. If a society employs an auditor appointed for any other district, special terms may be arranged.

The auditor may accept audits on terms lower than those of the above scale.

10. Auditors shall hold their appointments from year to year, beginning on the 1st day of January in each year. The Treasury reserves to itself entire discretion as to reappointing them.

11. They shall send in half-yearly to the Treasury a list containing the names of the societies audited by them during the previous half-year, and the fees received from each society, distinguishing societies under the Friendly Societies Acts from societies under the Industrial and Provident Societies Acts.

12. The scales of fees above laid down will only remain in force from year to year. At the end of any year they may be confirmed or altered in such manner as the Treasury may direct.

13. Auditors are requested to make themselves acquainted with the provisions of the Friendly Societies Acts, and of the Industrial and Provident Societies Act, 1876, which affect the exercise of their functions. Their attention is particularly directed to Sections 14 and 32 of the Friendly Societies Act, 1875, and to Sections 10 and 18 of the Industrial and Provident Societies Act, 1876.

APPENDIX (C.)

INSTRUCTIONS TO PUBLIC VALUERS.

Appendix (C.)

INSTRUCTIONS to Public Valuers appointed under the Friendly Societies Act.

1. A LIMITED number of Public Valuers, not exceeding for the present 14, will be appointed for England, Scotland, and Ireland respectively. They will not be ranked as public servants, and will have no salaries, nor any claim to pension or gratuity.

2. A Public Valuer is bound to undertake by himself, or through some other Public Valuer, every valuation under the Act tendered to him by a society (the term to include a branch of a society) within the country for which he is appointed.

3. The Valuer may require that the particulars for valuation shall be supplied to him in such form as he may think fit, together with a copy of the rules for the time being of the society, and copies of the annual returns, and also of the annual statements of account of the society, where these are not identical with the annual returns, for at least the five years next preceding the date up to which the valuation is to be made.

4. The Valuer may ask for such further information as to the affairs of the society as he may deem necessary for the purpose of his valuation.

5. In no valuation of a society's future sickness liabilities shall the total sickness per annum at each age up to age 70 expected to be experienced be less than that given by "Ratcliffe's Sickness Experience for the Years 1865-70, of the Manchester Unity of Oddfellows, Rural, Town, and City districts combined."

6. In the case of societies granting sick allowance beyond the age of 70, the Valuer shall call attention in his report to the principles on which he has valued this portion of the sickness liabilities, with special reference to the probable effect of cases of prolonged sickness on the funds of the society.

7. In no valuation of a society's future sickness liabilities shall a higher rate of mortality at any age be employed than that given by "Ratcliffe's Mortality Experience for the Years 1865-70, of the Manchester Unity of Oddfellows, Rural, Town, and City districts combined."

8. In the case of societies having members engaged in occupations more than usually hazardous or injurious to health, or having members residing in localities known to be unhealthy, the Valuer shall in his valuation make such allowance or allowances therefor as regards conditions 5 and 6 as he may deem expedient, and shall call special attention thereto in his report, on the valuation.

9. The valuer may, in estimating the value of a society's liabilities under its assured benefits, use such a rate or rates of interest as he may consider expedient; but when such rate or rates shall exceed 3 per cent., he shall, in his report on the valuation, state fully the grounds on which a higher rate of interest is made use of.

10. No allowance is to be made for possible future profits arising from secessions, unless the number of contributing members in the society, and the nature of the society's business be such as fully to justify an allowance being made, and the Valuer shall in all such cases state in his report what allowance has been made, and the grounds on which it is made.

11. The method of valuation must in no case have the effect of treating any of the society's assurance contracts as assets; in other words, the liability of the society under its assurance contracts must in no case be treated as having a negative value.

12. The valuation report must in all cases state distinctly what provision is made for future expenses of management, and the Valuer shall state whether in his opinion, judging from the experience of the society, such provision is adequate.

13. In making his report on the valuation, the Valuer shall in all cases specially call attention to the assumptions on which the valuation is based, particular care being exercised in this case where the number of members is small.

14. The Valuer shall make his valuation and furnish to the society the report and abstract of valuation required by section 14 (1, f) of the "Friendly Societies Act, 1875," within three calendar months after the necessary particulars have been supplied to him, unless there be just and sufficient reason for any delay.

15. If

15. If in consequence of the large number of valuations under the Act which are submitted to him, a Public Valuer is unable to complete any such valuation within the time above specified, he may transfer such valuation to another Public Valuer upon the same terms and conditions.

16. When the benefits to be valued do not exceed two classes of sick allowance and deferred annuities, together with sums payable on the deaths of members and of their wives, the scales of payment to public valuers shall be as follows:—

						£.	s.	d.
For societies consisting of not more than 75 members	-	-	-			3	3	-
For societies with over 75 members and not exceeding 100 members						4	4	-
"	"	100	"	"	150	5	5	-

"	"	300	"	"	400	8	8	-
"	"	400	"	"	500	9	9	-
"	"	500	"	"	600	10	10	-
"	"	600	"	"	750	12	12	-
"	"	750	"	"	1,000	15	15	-

With a further 5 l. 5 s. for every 500 members, or portion thereof, beyond the total amount of members not exceeding 2,500. Beyond 2,500 members the fee to be a matter of special arrangement, as well as in all cases where the number of benefits exceeds that above mentioned.

Valuers may accept valuations on terms lower than those of the above scale.

Valuers must take such steps as they think fit for obtaining payment of their fees.

17. Valuers shall hold their appointments from year to year, beginning on the 1st January 1877.

The Treasury reserves to itself entire discretion as to reappointing them.

18. The scale of fees above laid down will remain in force till the end of 1880.

At the end of that time it will either be confirmed or altered in such manner as the Treasury may direct.

19. The Treasury reserves to itself the right of appointing additional Valuers if required.

20. Valuers are requested to make themselves acquainted with the provisions of the Friendly Societies Acts, and with the Treasury Regulations which affect the exercise of their functions. Their attention is particularly directed to sections 14 and 32 of the Act of 1875.*

* The public valuers appointed under the Friendly Societies Act are for England and Wales:—

APPENDIX (E.)

CORRESPONDENCE in reference to a VALUATION of the STEVENAGE PROVIDENT SOCIETY, tendered but not accepted (see Report, p. 25.)

28, Abingdon-street, S.W.,
19 October 1876.

Dear Sir,

Stevenage Friendly Society.

THERE are several points in the abstract of valuation up to 31 December 1875, which seem to require explanation, and I am in communication with the gentleman who made the calculation in reference thereto, as in this way considerable delay will be saved, I shall be glad, in the meantime, to have information on the following points:

1. The Sickness Allowances.—Are they payable for the whole of life?
2. The Contributions.—Are they payable up to 70, as stated by the valuer in the abstract of valuation?
3. The Entrance Fees paid.—I cannot follow this item. As the fees are stated to have been paid, the money has been no doubt received, and one would naturally assume it to be included in the balance of stock, 5,033 l. 1s. 5d. Will you kindly state exactly how the matter stands, explaining how the entrance fees paid of 91 l. 7s. 3d. had accumulated to 178 l. 5s. 1d., and in what security this sum is now invested?
4. To loss on Ivel Bonds, what was this investment, and has the same been written off in the society's books?
5. There is a mistake as to the reserve for future expenses and profits, which is only 20 per cent. "of the gross value of the monthly contributions and entrance "fees," and not 25 per cent.

J. Elliott, Esq., Secretary,
The Provident Society, Stevenage, Herts.

I am, &c.
(signed) Wm. Sutton, Actuary.

Dear Sir, The Mutual Society, Stationers' Hall Buildings,
36 to 40, Ludgate Hill, London, 20 October 1876.

Re Stevenage Valuation.

REFERRING to rule 32 of the rules, you will see that "no member shall be entitled to full pay for more than 26 weeks in any one period of 12 months, nor shall he be again entitled to full pay until he shall have been off the sick list for 26 weeks." Now the table I valued by allows the sick pay continuously up to 70, which is more than sufficient to meet the liability as per above rule; hence the reason for my valuing the sick benefits up to 70 in lieu of over the whole of life. As regards the entrance fees, perhaps it will be as well that you drop a line to Mr. Elliott as to their investment. I took their accumulation up to the date of valuation as an asset; if they are included in the invested funds, which I suppose they must be, credit must only be given for the interest. Having regard to rule 32, to value the sick pay continuously over the whole of life, must obviously make the liability very much too large.

W. Sutton, Esq.

I am, &c.
(signed) Wm. Curtis Otter.

Dear Sir, The Provident Society, Stevenage.
24 October 1876.

IN reply to your letter of the 19th instant, asking for information on several points in the valuation abstract lately sent you respecting this society, and taking the items as noted, I have to state that:

1. The sickness allowances are payable for the whole of life.
2. The contributions are payable for the whole of life.
3. As to the entrance fees: Looking at Table B. of Mr. Otter, who is responsible for the 178·254 l., this seems to me clear; as the fees, 91 l. 7s. 3d., have been received according to the statements, and although Mr. Otter gives his calculation at 3 per cent., much of the investments have been at 4 per cent. I should include the amount amount 178·254 l. in the 5,033 l. 1*s.* 5*d.*, and state that the various sums shown had been from time to time invested as received. Appendix (E.)

4. The Ivel Bonds were held as mortgages on the tolls of the Ivel Navigation; and, being by an Act passed last Session rendered irrecoverable, are, as you will see by the printed Report enclosed, now written off our account.

5. The mistake as to the 20 per cent. instead of the 25 per cent., must be referred to Mr. Otter for explanation.

W. Sutton, Esq., Actuary,
Registry of Friendly Societies
Central Office, 28, Abingdon-street, S.W.

I am, &c.
(signed) J. Elliott, Secretary,
Stevenage Provident Society.

28, Abingdon-street, S.W.,
26 October 1876.

Dear Sir,

Stevenage Friendly Society.

I HAVE made inquiry of the secretary of this society as to the entrance fees, and he writes as follows:—

“ Looking at Table B. of Mr. Otter, who is responsible for the 178·254 l., this “ seems to me clear, as the fees 91 l. 7*s.* 3*d.* have been received according to the “ statement, and although Mr. Otter gives his calculation at 3 per cent., much of the “ investments have been at 4 per cent. I should include the amount 178·254 l. “ in the 5,033 l. 1*s.* 5*d.*, and state that the various sums shown had been from time “ invested as received.”

From his letter I gather that I am referred generally to you for explanation, and I shall be glad to know whether you are not now of opinion that the item in the valuation balance sheet—

“ By present value of 91 l. 7*s.* 3*d.* entrance fees paid . . . 178 l. 5*s.* 1*d.* ” should be struck out; whatever may have been derived from entrance fees being included in the balance of stock, 5,033 l. 1*s.* 5*d.*

As regards the valuation of the liabilities of the society I find, from your letter of 20th instant, that you consider you have made ample allowance for the sick pay liabilities throughout life by reserving the value of full sick pay up to 70; but as it transpired at our interview on 19th instant that you were not aware the value of sick pay throughout life had been tabulated by Mr. Ratcliffe, I shall be glad to know on what grounds the course adopted can be defended.

The question of what allowance should be made for reduced sick pay, is recognised to be one of great doubt and difficulty, and although it may appear reasonable to make some allowance for this in determining whether a society is solvent, it becomes a very different matter when to make such allowance shows a surplus, and such surplus is then and there divided among the members, and for ever lost to the society.

I shall be glad to see you again before taking further steps in the matter.

Dear Sir,

Re Stevenage Valuation.

I FIND the papers I have by me herein will not enable me to make the necessary calculations that are required. Will you kindly forward me all the papers you have in reference to my valuation, which I will return you when done with? I want the schédule of particulars, as well as the statements of the valuation. If you have not these I must get them from Mr. Elliott.

Apologising for the trouble I am giving you,

Wm. Sutton, Esq.

Appendix (E.)

60, Grosvenor Park, Camberwell, S.E.,
7 November 1876.

Dear Sir,

Stevenage Valuation.

I HAVE, as you wish, made a test valuation of the sick pay by the whole life table, No. 46, of Ratcliffe, and find the result to be 7,723 £, as per enclosed pencilled figures. This is of course much in excess of the amount I brought out by Table 56,* which stops the benefit at 70; but when we consider that the members are only on full pay for six months, and then half-pay for the remainder of the period of their illness, it is clear that the above amount will be reduced nearly 50 per cent., which brings the liability down to the amount I give in my valuation very nearly. It would be very unjust to the members to value the full sick pay over the whole of life when only half is paid after the first six months. No doubt the most correct way to have valued the risks would have been to have valued the full pay for the first six months, and the half pay for the remainder of life; however, this would not have made much difference from the result I give by the plan I adopted,† therefore I think you may pass my results as correct. Mr. Elliott called on me on Saturday complaining about the delay in obtaining their certificate from you, when I told him that you were raising some objections to the principle of my valuation, and that you wished me to amend my report by increasing the sick pay liabilities, and thus reduce the surplus for division, but he says the members will not consent to this; they will have the money or break up the society.

He says they have very few members on the funds, and indeed there is not a single one that is an incumbrance to the society; neither does he anticipate, as you suggested to me, that the society will, in the course of a few years, have a large number of pensioners on the funds. Just give the half-pay question your further consideration, when I think you will see with me that the sick liabilities that I have deduced are much nearer the truth than those resulting from valuing the full sick pay over the whole of life for reasons previously explained.

I think, therefore, you had better strain a point and grant them their certificate, to enable them to divide the surplus I have recommended in my report.

Wm. Sutton, Esq.

I am, &c.
(signed) Wm. Curtis Otter.

28, Abingdon-street, S.W.,
18 November 1876.

Sir,

Stevenage Friendly Society.

In accordance with the arrangements made at our interview on Thursday, 16th inst., I now send you in writing, for the information of the members, particulars of the results of my examination of the valuation of the society's liabilities and assets, as at 31st December 1875, sent here to be filed in accordance with the Friendly Societies Act, 1875.

Mr. W. Curtis Otter in his valuation brings out a gross surplus of 3,548 £. 6 s. 10 d., of which he recommends that 1,800 £. should be divided among the members, and the remainder set aside as a provision for management expenses and other contingencies. This gross surplus is, I find, thus obtained:—

1. And almost entirely, by treating the sick pay up to 70 as all full pay, and as a set-off, making no allowance whatever for sick pay after that age.
2. By counting as an asset the entrance fees paid with the interest they are supposed to have yielded. This is of course an error; the monies received as entrance fees having gone into the general funds. Mr. Otter admits the mistake, and thus the gross surplus shown by him is reduced to 3,370 £. 1 s. 9 d.

Now as regards (1), you will remember that at our interview I pointed out the extremely unsatisfactory nature of the Tables, at present existing, which deal with sickness after 70, and also as to the want of trustworthy information, at all ages, as regards full-pay, half-pay, and sickness, as distinguished from one another. When these facts are borne in mind, we see at once how necessary it is for the ultimate solvency of the society that every care and precaution should be taken, before deciding that the society has a surplus of profit which can be safely taken from the accumulated savings and returned to the members. After giving the matter very full consideration, I am of opinion that Mr. Otter's valuation shows most conclusively that this has not been done, and it is hardly a matter of doubt that at the present time the society has not 1 £. in hand over and above the amount which would, as far as can be anticipated, secure the ultimate solvency of the society.

As public valuers under the Act will shortly be appointed, I would at any rate suggest that the members should wait until such time as they can make use of the services of a public valuer to confirm, or not, Mr. Otter's valuation.

Mr. G. Elliott, Provident Society,
Stevenage,

Yours, &c.
(signed) Wm. Sutton, Actuary.

* The amount here referred to as the estimated value of sickness liabilities was 4,347 £.

† In order to verify the accuracy of this statement, the necessary calculations were made, from which it appeared that the difference referred to would have increased the reserve 1,124 £.

The Provident Society, Stevenage,
22 November 1876.

Dear Sir,

I THANK you for your letter dated the 18th (but not received until the 21st) relative to your views on the valuation of the liabilities and assets of this society.

Your letter was considered by the committee at a meeting held yesterday, the result being that I was directed to write to the Registrar to say, that the committee resolve to act upon the valuation of Mr. Otter, and that they wish for the registration to be completed as soon as possible.

Again thanking you for your attention to the matter,

Dear Sir,

AT a meeting of the committee of this society yesterday, after hearing the report of my visit to you on Thursday last, and after the reading of Mr. Sutton's letter relative to the same matter, it was resolved "That the secretary write to the Registrar of Friendly Societies, and state that the committee resolve to act upon the valuation of Mr. Otter; and also state, that the committee respectfully request the registration of the new rules as soon as possible."

There appears to be a widespread feeling on the subject.

Sir,

Provident Society, Stevenage.

I HAVE to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of 22nd instant, stating that the committee have resolved to act upon the valuation of Mr. W. C. Otter. It only remains for me, therefore, to state that the said valuation cannot be accepted by this Department as in compliance with the Friendly Societies Act, 1875, and that the Chief Registrar has under consideration the question of whether it would be desirable to advertise this fact in the local papers, and to publish at the same time the entire correspondence relating thereto.

Sir,

I HAVE to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 23rd instant, and to inform you that the letter has been laid before the committee, who have desired me to write and ask you if you will kindly let them know what they are to consider to be "a valuation in compliance with the Friendly Societies Act, 1875," as referred to in your letter.

The favour of a reply will also oblige,

Sir,

Stevenage Provident Society.

I HAVE to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of 25th instant, stating that the committee have desired you to ask "what they are to consider to be a valuation in compliance with the Friendly Societies Act, 1875," and beg to state, in reply, that if you will refer to my letter of 18th instant, and to the Act (Section 14 (f)), it will at once appear why Mr. Otter's valuation cannot be received by this Department as in compliance with the Act.

The valuation abstract and report with the other papers are returned herewith.

Sir,
I HAVE to thank you for your letter of yesterday's date, and also for the papers returned at the same time.

Your letter will be duly laid before the committee at their next meeting, and will, there is no doubt, receive special consideration.

The Provident Society, Stevenage,
5 December 1876.

Sir,
THE committee of the Stevenage Provident Society have this day had under their consideration your letter of the 29th ult., and in reference thereto, have directed me to submit to you the following observations:—

They believe that the society has strictly conformed to the Clause f, Section 14, of the Friendly Societies Act, by causing the assets and liabilities of the society to be valued by a valuer appointed by the society; by sending to the Registrar a report signed by such valuer, and which report states the address and calling or profession of the valuer, on the condition of the society; by sending an abstract made by the valuer of the results of his valuation; and by sending such information with respect to the benefits assured and contributions receivable by the society, and of its funds and effects, debts and credits, as the Registrar has required.

The society is, in consequence of the operation of the Friendly Societies Act, 1875, under a necessity to make some further provision for the expenses of management; and, the general feeling of the members of the society is such that it will meet with the approval of nearly every one if the proposed rule is certified.

I am, &c.

Stevenage Provident Society.

W. Sutton, Esq., Actuary, Central Office,

28, Abingdon Street, S.W.,
7 December 1876.

Sir,
YOUR letter herein of 5th instant has been duly received. If you will refer to Section 14 (5) of the Act, you will find that the abstract of valuation is required to be made in such form and to contain such particulars as the Chief Registrar prescribes; and I have to state once more, for the information of the committee, that the abstract of valuation in question is admittedly incorrect, and cannot be received by this Department as in compliance with the Act.

I shall be obliged if the committee will be good enough to point out, for the information of this Department, the clauses in the Act whose operation necessitates the application of a portion of the benefit funds to provide the expenses of management.

Yours, &c.

Sir,
I HAVE to acknowledge the receipt of your letter, dated the 7th instant, and to state in reply that the committee believe that Section 14 (Sub-section 5) of the Act has been duly complied with, as all such information as has been required has been sent from and returned to the society, and the committee consider that the particular sub-section quoted clearly shows what a considerable item of expense must be incurred by attention thereto, without reckoning the increased labours of any one acting as secretary of a society like the Provident Society.

APPENDIX (F.)

Appendix (F.)

INSTRUCTIONS TO INSPECTORS.

INSTRUCTIONS to Inspectors appointed under the Friendly Societies Act, 1875.

THE inspector's business is confined to the two following functions:—

- (1.) Examining into the affairs of the society.
- (2.) Reporting thereon to the Chief Registrar, or as the case may be, the Assistant Registrar for Scotland or Ireland. He is in no wise an arbitrator, and has no power to decide disputed questions of law or of fact; nor has he in any way to fulfil the duties of an auditor or valuer.

For the due discharge of his functions, however, he is invested with certain important powers:

- (1.) He may require the production of all or any of the books and documents of the society.
- (2.) He may examine on oath any
 - (a) Officer,
 - (b) Member,
 - (c) Agent, or
 - (d) Servant

of the society in relation to its business, administering the oath himself (Section 23, Sub-section 1).

The word "officer" by the definition in Section 4 "extends to any trustee, treasurer, secretary, or member of the committee of management of a society, or person appointed by the society to sue and be sued on its behalf."

In conducting his inquiries the inspector should in the first instance put the applicants or their representatives upon the proof of their allegations. Bearing, however, in mind that his task is to examine and report upon the affairs of the society, he is in no wise bound to limit his inquiries to the proof or disproof of the specific allegations made.

He will at all times use his discretion as to examining persons upon oath, but where fraud is alleged, or any act carrying penal consequences, he should always do so. The form of oath (to be taken on the Scriptures) may be as follows:—

"The evidence you shall give touching the matters in question shall be the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, so help you God."

(An affirmation may be taken instead of an oath in the cases allowed by law.)

Having heard the statements made on behalf of the applicants, the inspector will require the trustees of the society, in whom all its property is vested (Section 16, Sub-section 3) to produce its books and documents, or such of them as he may deem necessary, calling upon them at the same time for any evidence in disproof of the applicant's allegations.

If there is any likelihood that the production of books or documents will be unwilling or incomplete, it will be well for the inspector to make his requisition in writing, as by Section 39 every document purporting to be signed by an inspector is, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, to be received in evidence without proof of the signature. The same applies to the summoning of witnesses.

If the society refuses to produce its books, he should warn it that it commits an offence under Section 14 (3a) of the Act, as failing "to do or allow to be done any act or thing which the society is by this Act required to give, send, do, or allow to be done."

If the society wilfully neglect or refuses to furnish any information which the inspector requires for the purposes of his inspection, he should warn it that it commits an offence under Section 14 (3b) of the Act, as wilfully neglecting or refusing "to furnish any information required for the purposes of this Act by the Chief or any other Registrar or other person authorised by this Act."

If the society wilfully furnishes to him information in any respect false or insufficient, he should warn it that it commits an offence under Section 14 (3c) of the Act.

(By the term "society" must always be understood the trustees.)

Under the "Act to amend the Law of Evidence, 14 & 15 Vict. c. 99, s. 2," it would appear that the "parties" to the inquiry are "compellable" to give evidence; but the inspector does not appear to have any power of compelling the attendance of mere witnesses, nesses, and he certainly has not any power of committing for contempt of his authority. The general principle that no person is compellable to answer any question tending to criminate himself, applies of course to the evidence given before him.

Nor can he, it would appear, impound any document, or require the same to be delivered up to any person or left in his custody; or give any order or direction as to any matter to be done by the society, or by individuals, otherwise than for the purpose of his examination into the affairs of the society, and his report thereon.

When the examination, so far as he is able to make it, is completed, the inspector will make his report upon it.

Bearing in mind that the Chief or Assistant Registrar will have to direct on whom the burthen of the expenses of the inspection will fall (Section 23, proviso c.), the inspector will specify in his report as well instances of misconduct or mismanagement on the part of the society or its officers, which may justify the inspection applied for, as any malpractices on the part of the applicants which may render it equitable to throw upon them all or part of its cost, and all other matters that should be considered.

He will more particularly report any acts or default coming within Section 14 (3), Section 16 (9), Section 27, Section 28, Section 32, and Section 30, if the society is within that section, as also when an offence appears to have been committed, whether any particular officer of the society has rendered himself guilty of it within Section 14 (4), or if not, what members of the committee of management are exempt from liability for such offence under the same sub-section.

Should any offence under the Act appear to him to have been committed during the examination he will give specific details as to the facts, in the event of the Chief Registrar deeming it advisable that the offenders be prosecuted.

It is needless to remind the inspectors that they are to be strictly impartial, never to assume that a violation of the law has been committed until it has been proved, and that they should be prepared to meet with cases of frivolous or vexatious applications for inspection as well as of real mismanagement or fraud.

Chief Registrar.

APPENDIX (H.)SUSPENDED AWARD OF DISSOLUTION OF THE BRADFORD CALEDONIAN FRIENDLY SOCIETY.(1.) REPORT of the ACTUARY on the Application for an Award of Dissolution of the BRADFORD CALEDONIAN FRIENDLY SOCIETY.

Appendix (H.)

Bradford Caledonian Friendly Society.

Sir,

9 December 1876.

HAVING fully considered the various matters involved in the investigation of this society's affairs in connection with the application for an award of dissolution, I beg to report as follows:—

With the existing rates of contributions and benefits, the society is in an insolvent condition; but bearing in mind that there exists, in addition to sickness benefit throughout life, a further provision for old age in the form of an annuity after attaining the age of 65, it would appear to be a case where such an adjustment of the contributions and benefits can be made as would put the society into a proper financial position; and I therefore beg to make the following recommendations, which would, if carried out, in my opinion prevent the necessity of any award of dissolution being made.

First. All sick allowance should cease on attaining the age of 65.

Second. The amount of allowances for sickness to remain as at present, with this condition added, viz.:—That when a member shall have received on account of one or more attacks of sickness the sum in all of 25 l. (twenty-five pounds), he shall not be entitled to any further sick allowance unless the next ensuing investigation into the affairs of the society (Section 14 (f)) shall show that the society's funds will permit thereof.

Third. The total contributions at present paid by the members to be applied solely to meet the claims under benefits, and a levy to be made every year to defray all expenses incurred in the conduct of the society's affairs.

Fourth. The sum received as interest in the course of any year on the funds in hand at the beginning of the year, including the contributions then due and payable, must be not less than 4½ (four-and-a-half) per cent. thereon, and in the event of such sum not amounting in any year to 4½ (four-and-a-half) per cent., a levy to be made sufficient to bring it up to that amount.

Fifth. No new members to be received except under a properly graduated scale of contributions, to be drawn up by an actuary. It is to be distinctly understood that the rules of the society, if altered as above recommended, would be again subject to revision when the next and subsequent valuations are made under the Act.

I am, &c.

J. M. Ludlow, Esq.,
Chief Registrar.

Actuary.

(2.) SUSPENSION of AWARD of DISSOLUTION.

9 December 1876.

PURSUANT to 38 and 39 Vict. c. 60, s. 25 (8 b), I suspend for 12 months, and for as much longer as I may then deem necessary, the making of any award for the dissolution of the Bradford Caledonian Friendly Society, to enable the society to make such alterations and adjustment of contributions and benefits as are suggested in the report of Mr. Wm. Sutton, actuary, dated 9th December 1876.

Chief Registrar.

APPENDIX (I.)

FRIENDLY SOCIETIES IN VICTORIA.

(1.) STATISTICS of Societies for 1876.

The Introductory Report of Mr. H. H. Hayter, the Government statist, states that 34 societies, with 755 branches and 45,920 members, made returns, being an increase over the preceding year, 92 per cent. as against 78 per cent.; 47 branches made no return at all, and 16 has made none for two years. The total number of distinct societies or branches in the colony is stated to be 807, and the total number of members is estimated at over 50,000. The enormous prevalence of the orders is shown by the fact that out of the 807 branches or societies, only nine appear to be what would be termed in this country ordinary Friendly Societies. The Manchester Unity is stated to have sent in complete returns for all its 155 branches, the Independent Order of Odd Fellows for all its 40, the United Ancient Order of Druids for all its 35. On the other hand, the Independent Order of Rechabites, which stands at the head of the test for the number of its branches, only sent complete returns for 156 out of 168, and the Ancient Order of Foresters for 118 out of 127. The statist complains of the late sending of the returns, and of the difficulty of obtaining them. The income of the societies furnishing returns was 161,653 £, and the expenditure 143,124 £, being an increase of about 24,000 £, and nearly 21,000 £ respectively on the year 1874. The amount standing to the credit of the sick and funeral fund was 320,899 £ at the end of 1875; that to the credit of the management or incidental expenses fund, 12,158 £, the one being 68,000 £ in excess, the other 898 £ less than at the end of 1874. The contributions and entrance fees amounted to 120,813 £, 7,964 £ more than in 1874; the benefits in sickness, for funeral expenses, medical expenses, and medicines, to 104,225 £, or 15,552 £ more; the benefits amounting to 86 per cent. of the contributions, as against 79 per cent. in 1874. For an average number of 45,921 members there were 9,862 attacks of sickness, lasting 53,647 weeks, and 427 deaths. It appears that the average time per member for which sick pay was given has been steadily increasing for years past (from 5.6 days per member in 1871 to 7.0 in 1875), a fact which, as Mr. Hayter says, "merits the earnest attention of members of Friendly Societies." Phthisis continues to be the most fatal malady, and is credited with 93 deaths out of the 427; heart disease comes next, with 32, then brain diseases, &c., with 28. The total mortality from zymotic diseases is only 46, and does not include one death from small-pox, and only one from scarlatina. Only one death occurred above 70, and there appear to be only 19 members above that age in all the societies making returns. No table is this year furnished of the occupations of members.

(2.) RECOMMENDATIONS OF THE FRIENDLY SOCIETIES COMMISSIONERS.

1. That there should be an amended Act passed relating exclusively to Friendly Societies.

2. That the new Act should include amongst the objects of the societies, in addition to the sick and funeral benefits, provision for mutual relief when on travel in search of employment, or in shipwreck, and for insurance of workmen's tools against fire to a small amount.

3. That all provision for granting annuities and endowments should be excluded from the Act.

4. That all building societies at present registered under the Friendly Societies Act should transfer their registration to the Building Societies Act.

5. That reserves of land for general recreation purposes might still be granted to the societies, but no special grants should be made to particular societies for ostensibly charitable purposes, and that the reserves granted to four of the societies on Emerald Hill, and all similar grants which have not been put to the stipulated use, should be resumed by the Government with compensation for improvements.

6. That the offices of Registrar and Certifying Barrister should be combined with a central office; the appointment to be made by the Governor in Council, and the qualification to be seven years' standing at the Bar.

7. That the right of appeal to the Supreme Court against the refusal of the Registrar to grant a certificate of registration to a new society should be allowed.

8. That a fixed and moderate scale of fees for registration should be included in the new Act, but that no fees should be paid for re-perusal of rules or verbal alterations.

9. That the furnishing of periodical returns and statements of accounts to the Government should be made compulsory on the societies, with a penalty for non-compliance.

10. That the furnishing of requisite data for quinquennial valuations of their assets and liabilities should also be made compulsory, the Government undertaking to make the valuations.

11. That

11. That the necessity of making effective periodical audits of their accounts should be urged on the attention of the societies by the Government.

12. That in the rules of the societies, as revised by the proposed new Act, provision should be made for an improved system of clearances.

13. That the Government should procure for the guidance of the societies a model table of rates of contributions for sickness, drawn up by a competent actuary, its use being left optional with the societies; and should also disseminate information relating to the average of sickness and mortality under variable conditions and circumstances.

14. That the office of Certifying Actuary should be continued, and his powers and duties more clearly defined.

15. That new provision should be made for the appointment and removal of trustees, and their powers and duties be more clearly defined in a new Act.

16. That trustees should be legally prohibited from borrowing money from the societies they represent.

17. That all the authorised officers of the societies should be brought within the cognisance of the law.

18. That provision should be made for summary conviction and punishment in all cases of frauds committed by officers.

19. That branches should only be registered as integral parts of the parent societies, the power of dissolution without the concurrence of the latter be taken away from them, and also the power of passing special resolutions for their own amalgamating with other societies, or transfer of their engagements.

20. That provision should be made in the new Act for the transfer to the parent society of the funds of any branch on its becoming insolvent, or voluntarily severing its connection with the society.

21. That the new Act should contain provisions against any deceptive similarity of name in the case of any new society.

22. That the amended Act should clearly specify the obligations and duties of societies, the general character of their rules, the mode of settling disputes, the mode of proceeding in the case of a lunatic member, and the forms to be followed in case of dissolution of a society.

23. That the limits of investment for the funds of societies fixed by the present Act should be extended.

24. That the societies should be prohibited by law from investing any part of their funds in real property for speculative purposes, and that branches should not be allowed to build halls for meetings, &c., except on certain stringent conditions.

25. That the formation of local dispensaries by combination of the societies for their own sole use and benefit, should be legalised.

26. That all Friendly Societies should be compelled to register themselves under the new law, and no new society should be allowed to be established without being registered.

27. That the new Act should contain a definition of legal offences, together with a general penalty clause.

28. That the present rule as to the maximum of benefit to be allowed to any member should remain unaltered.

29. That the duties assigned to the office of treasurer in the existing Act be transferred to the trustees in the new Act.

30. That the guarantees required from officers holding positions of trust in the societies be enlarged to include guarantee associations.

31. That the new Act shall contain provisions to compel officers holding positions of trust to pay over on demand all moneys or securities held by them on behalf of the societies.

32. That the Registrar's certificate should be held to be legal evidence of the existence of a society, and that in all legal cases the presumption of proof should be on the side of the societies.

33. That in case of the insolvency or death of any officer holding moneys belonging to a society, a preferential claim should be allowed on his estate.

34. That the Registrar should have power to order an audit of the accounts of a society, on being memorialised to that effect by ten members.

Appendix (K.)

RECENT GERMAN LEGISLATION ON FRIENDLY SOCIETIES.*

LAW relating to Registered Friendly Societies of the 8th April 1876.

WE, William by the grace of God, Emperor of Germany and King of Prussia, &c., decree in the name of the German Empire, with the consent of the Federal Council, and of the diet of the realm, as follows:—

Section 1. Societies whose object is the mutual relief of their members in case of sickness obtain the rights of a Registered Friendly Society under the following conditions:

Section 2. The society must take a name which is different from that of all other Friendly Societies in the same place, or in the same commune (gemeinde), with the addition of the description, "Registered Friendly Society."

Section 3. The rules of the society must provide for:—

- (1.) The name, place of business (sitz), and object of the society.
- (2.) The conditions of entrance and withdrawal of the members.
- (3.) The amount of the contributions which are to be paid by the members, and if the employers are legally bound to contribute, the amount of their subscriptions.
- (4.) The conditions, the kind, and the extent of the relief.
- (5.) The formation of the board (of direction), the representation thereon of the employers legally bound to contribute, as well as the legalisation (legitimation) of its members and the extent of its powers.
- (6.) The constitution and calling of the general meeting; how its resolutions are carried; and as to the right of voting of the employers legally bound to contribute.
- (7.) The altering of rules.
- (8.) How the funds are to be disposed of in case of the dissolution or closing of the society.
- (9.) The preparation and audit of the yearly balance-sheet.

The rules shall contain no provision which is not connected with the object of the society, or which is contrary to the prescriptions of this law.

Section 4. Two copies of the rules are to be personally delivered to the communal board (Gemeindevorstand) in whose district the society has its place of business by the persons provisionally entrusted with the conduct of the business, or by the board of the society personally. The communal board had to send the rules without delay to the higher administrative authority (höhere verwaltungs behörde), which decides whether the society is to be authorised. The decision is to be communicated within six weeks.

Authorisation may only be refused if the rules do not satisfy the requirements of this law. If authorisation be refused, the grounds of refusal must be stated. In case of refusal an appeal is open; as respects procedure and jurisdiction, the provisions of Sections 20 and 21 of the "Gewerbeordnung" take effect. In Alsace-Lorraine, instead thereof, the provisions there in force concerning procedure in disputed administrative cases have corresponding application. If the authorisation be granted, a copy of the rules, with the indication (vermuth) of the authorisation having been obtained, is to be given back to the society.

Alterations of rules are subject to similar prescriptions.

A society which, for the purpose of receiving contributions and paying relief, establishes local offices, has to obtain its authorisation from the administrative authority of the district wherein the chief office is situate.

The higher administrative authority has to enter the name of authorised societies in a register.

Section 5. The society in its own name can acquire rights and incur liabilities, acquire property in land and other rights over it, and can sue and be sued.

For all liabilities of the society the funds of the society alone are responsible to the creditors of the society.

The ordinary jurisdiction over the society is that of the court of the district in which the society has its place of business.

Section 6. For the admission of members a written declaration, or subscription to the rules, is required. The marks of those unable to write require the attestation of a member of the board.

Admission

Admission can only be made dependent on membership in other societies or unions, if such membership is provided by the rules for all members on the establishment of the society, otherwise the members cannot be bound to oblige themselves to acts or omissions, which have no connection with the object of the society.

Section 7. The right to relief from the society begins for all members at latest after the lapse of the thirteenth week following admission. If a member has already acquired the right to relief, he retains the same also for the same period after he leaves the society or is excluded. If the exclusion arise from arrears, then this period commences to run from the day up to which the contributions have been paid.

The granting of relief for the first week after the beginning of the sickness may be excepted. The exception of relief in cases of particular diseases is not to be allowed.

Section 8. The members are solely bound as towards the society to the contributions fixed in pursuance of this law and of the rules. The amount of the contribution may be variously measured in proportion to the sex, the state of health, the age, or the occupation of the member.

The establishing of classes of members with different rates of contribution and of relief is permissible. In other respects the contributions and relief for all members must be measured on similar principles.

Section 9. Employers who advance the contributions of their workmen have the right to retain them out of wages at the payment next before the day on which the contributions become due, or at any subsequent payment.

Section 10. The claim to relief cannot legally be transferred, nor pledged, nor be made the subject of an execution.

Section 11. Relief must, in case of the incapacity to work of the member entitled thereto, be granted for a period of 13 weeks at least, provided the incapacity to work does not sooner cease. During this time it must, for men, be equal daily to at least one-half; for women to at least one-third of the wages which, at the time when the rules are adopted, are paid in the place where the society is established to ordinary day workers, on the average of the year, according to the judgment of the local communal authority. In the amount of relief (up to two-thirds, however, at the most) may be reckoned the ensuring of medical treatment and medicine. Instead of all other relief hospital treatment may be provided.

Section 12. The daily relief may not exceed five times the lowest legal amount (s. 11).

Besides this relief the members may be provided with the appropriate means for the alleviation of their bodily wants which remain after recovery.

The ensuring of medical treatment also may be extended to the relations of members. Assistance may also be granted to the surviving families (hinbliebene) of deceased members, not to exceed ten times the amount of the weekly relief to which the deceased member had a claim.

Section 13. Neither may contributions be raised from the members, nor may payments be made from the funds of the society for any other objects than the forms of relief indicated in Sections 11 and 12, and the covering of the expenses of management.

Section 14. A reduction of contributions, or an increase of relief in societies to which the workmen are compelled to belong, requires the approval of the communal board or that of the larger communal union (Communalverband) on whose ordinance the obligation of becoming a member depends. An increase of contributions, or a reduction of the relief down to the lowest legal amount (s. 11), can be ordered by the said authorities for societies after hearing the board, if, according to the annual balance-sheet for the last year, the income of the society has not met the expenditure according to the rules.

Arrears of payments by members and their employers may be legally recovered for these societies.

Section 15. The exclusion of members from the society can only take place according to the forms and for the causes specified in the rules. It is only allowable for the failure to comply with a condition prescribed upon entrance; in the case of a default of payment, or of some such punishable act as constitutes a violation of the prescriptions contained in the rules. No member of two years standing can be excluded on account of withdrawal or exclusion from a society or a union. If the exclusion take place before the expiration of such time, they have a claim for a return of the entrance-money paid by them.

Section 16. The society must have a board [of directors] chosen by the general meeting, which represents it judicially and extra-judicially.

Employers who give subscriptions to the society have a claim to be represented on the board according to the amount of their subscriptions. Not more than one-third, however, of the votes in the board may be allowed to them.

Section 17. The composition of the board, as well as every alteration therein, is to be notified to the communal board in whose district the society is established. Such notice is to be given through the members of the board in person, or by an authenticated written declaration. If notice be not given, then an alteration in the composition of the board can only be set up against third persons when it is proved that it was known to the latter. For the authentication (legitimation) of the [proceedings of the] board in all affairs, including those which relate to mortgages and land debentures (grundschuldwesen), the testimony of the communal board that the persons therein mentioned had, at the time, been notified as members of the board, is sufficient.

Section 18. The authority of the board to represent the society in external matters is determined by the powers contained in the rules. Within the limits of their powers, all transactions concluded by the board in the name of the society, bind and justify the society.

Section 19. Beside the board a committee may be appointed to superintend the conduct of the business, which must be elected by the general meeting.

Section 20. In so far as the affairs of the society are not taken in hand by the board or committee, the determination thereon belongs to the general meeting.

The general meeting cannot transfer its authority to third persons.

Alterations of the rules require its consent, subject to the restriction mentioned in Section 14.

Section 21. In the general meeting every member present who is of age and in possession of civil rights, has a vote. Members in arrear of contributions may be excluded from voting.

The general meeting may also be composed of delegates, to be chosen from among the members competent to vote; the number of the delegates to be chosen must, however, be 30 at least.

Employers who subscribe to the funds have a claim to the right of voting. The proportion of this right of voting is to be settled with regard to their subscriptions; the number of their votes may not, however, exceed the half of the votes appertaining to the members of the society.

Section 22. General meetings may only be held within the German Empire at a place where the society possesses an office. When a general meeting is called, the object of the meeting must be stated. If the calling of a general meeting is proposed by the committee, or by one-tenth of the members competent to vote, the board is bound to call it.

Section 23. For those societies which the workmen are required to join the communal board, or that of the larger communal union on whose ordinance rests the obligation to join the society, may—

1. So long as the election of the board or committee does not take place, and, again, so long as the board or committee refuse to fulfil their duties, commit the performance of those duties to qualified persons.

2. So long as the general meeting, or some determination prescribed by the law or the rules to be taken by the general meeting, does not take place, perform the functions of such meeting.

Section 24. The receipts and expenditure of the society are to be kept separate and accounted for distinct from all receipts and expenditure foreign to the objects of the society, and in like manner the balances are to be kept separate.

Disposable funds may, except when placed in public Savings Banks, only be invested as the funds of persons under guardianship.

Section 25. In every fifth year the society must have the probable amount of its liabilities and the receipts to meet them valued by an actuary who has no share in the management of the society; must communicate the result in the prescribed form to the superintending authority, and render it accessible to all members who may wish to acquaint themselves with it.

Section 26. If, according to the result of the valuation the liabilities of the society exceed the receipts which are to meet them, then in default of other means of covering the deficit, either a reduction of the relief down to the lowest lawful amount must take place, or an increase of the contributions, in such a manner as that in the opinion of the actuary the restoration of the balance between the liabilities and the receipts of the society may be expected at the next valuation.

Section 27. The society is bound, within the prescribed periods, and in the prescribed forms, to send in to the superior administrative authority returns of the members, of the sickness and mortality, of the calculated days of contributions and relief, as well as a balance-sheet to the superintending authority. Upon the demand of the superintending authority it must notify (to it) the withdrawal of members.

Section 28. Societies which workmen are not required to join may be dissolved by a resolution of the general meeting, with the consent of at least four-fifths of the whole of the votes represented.

Section 29. The closing of a society by the higher administrative authority may take place— Appendix (K.)

1. If more than a fourth part of the members is in arrears of contributions, and a demand made by the superintending authority is followed neither by payment of the contributions in arrear, nor by exclusion of the negligent members ;

2. If the society, notwithstanding the demands made by the superintending authority, is four weeks in arrear with payments for undisputed relief ;

3. If the general meeting has taken a resolution contrary to the provisions of this law, or to the rules of the society, and has not complied with the demand of the superintending authority to revoke the same within the specified time ;

4. If members are bound to acts or omissions contrary to Section 6 of this law, or if, contrary to the provisions of Section 13, contributions are raised from the members, expenditure out of the funds takes place ;

5. If, in the case specified by Section 26, within a suitable time to be determined by the higher administrative authority, care is not taken for the restoration of the balance between the liabilities and the receipts of the society ;

6. If members are excluded from the society on any grounds not allowed by this law.

Appeal lies against the measures of the administrative authority as respects the procedure and jurisdiction, the provisions of Sections 20 and 21 of the "Gewerbeordnung" take effect.

In Alsace-Lorraine, instead thereof, the provisions there in force concerning procedure in disputed administrative cases have corresponding applications.

The declaration of bankruptcy of a society follows by force of law on its closing.

Section 30. At the dissolution of a society the winding up of the business, in so far as the general meeting does not otherwise determine thereon, is carried out by the board. If the latter do not fulfil their duty, or if the society is closed, then the superintending authority has to transfer the winding up of the business to qualified persons, and to publish their names.

Section 31. From the time of the dissolution or closing of a society, the members remain still pledged to for those payments, to which the rules bind them in the case of their withdrawal from the society.

The assets of the society, after the dissolution or closing, are first to be expended in the discharge of liabilities for relief contracted before the time of the dissolution or closing.

Section 32. Until a year after the dissolution or closing of a society, the authority to establish a new society for similar objects and for the same district, or for a part of the same, may be refused.

Section 33. With reference to the observance of this law, the societies are under the supervision of the authorities to be appointed for the purpose by the provincial Governments. The superintending authority may at all times examine the books of the society.

It calls the general meeting in case the board does not fulfil the duty imposed upon them by Section 22.

It can compel the members of the board, and in case of the dissolution or closing of a society, the persons entrusted with the winding up of the business, to perform the duties imposed by Section 27, through penalties by regulation (Ordnungsstrafe) up to 100 marks.

Section 34. Members of the board, or of the committee, who act contrary to the provisions of this law, are punishable judicially by fine up to 300 marks. If they have intentionally acted to the injury of the society, they are liable to the penalties of Section 266 of the Criminal Code.*

Section 35. A combination of several societies in one union for the sake of mutual assistance may take place with the consent of the general meetings of the separate societies, and on the basis of a written code of rules. The union must be governed by means of a board chosen from the boards or committees of the participating societies. Its duties and authorities are determined by the rules. Its place of business can only be in a place where one of the participating societies has its place of business. The union is subject, according to Section 33, to the supervision of the higher administrative authority of the district in which the board has its place of business.

(2.) LAW relating to the Alteration of Chapter 8 of the "Gewerbe Ordnung," of the 8th April 1876.

WE, William, by the grace of God, Emperor of Germany and King of Prussia, &c., decree in the name of the German Empire, with the consent of the Federal Council and of the Diet of the Realm as follows:—

Article 1.

Instead of Section 141 of the Trade Ordinance (Gewerbeordnung), the following provisions take effect:—

Section 141. By local regulations (Section 142) the formation of Friendly Societies may be ordered according to the provisions of the law of the 7th April 1876, concerning registered Friendly Societies for the support of journeymen, assistants, and factory workers.

In this case the communal authority is empowered, according to the provisions of the said law, to regulate the constitution of societies, after hearing the parties interested, and to establish their management on a secure basis.

Section 141a. By local regulations it may be made the duty of journeymen, assistants, and factory workers, who have passed their 16th year, to become members of a society founded by direction of the communal authority.

From the duty of joining such a Friendly Society, those are exempt who can prove that they are members of another registered Friendly Society.

One who does not fulfil the duty of joining the society may be called upon by the society for all payments which he would have been liable to make had he entered the society in due time.

Section 141b. Or those journeymen, assistants, and factory workers, who, according to the provisions of the provincial law, by virtue of an ordinance of the communal administration, pay regular contributions for the purpose of relieving the sick, the obligation to become members of a registered Friendly Society cannot be imposed by local regulation (Ortstatut).

Section 141c. By local regulation it may be determined—

1. That employers shall advance the contributions which their workmen have to pay to a Friendly Society, formed by ordinance of the communal authority, up to one-half of the wages earned, so far as these contributions become payable whilst such workmen continue at work with them.

2. That factory owners shall pay subscriptions in addition to the said contributions of their workmen, up to the amount of one-half of such contributions.

3. That where workmen are legally bound to enter a particular Friendly Society, their employers shall give notice to them for the society. Any one who does not fulfil this duty may be called upon by the society for all payments which his workmen would have been liable to make had they entered the society in due time, in the same manner as if he were a member.

Section 141d. The claims of a society, referred to in Section 141a, part 3, and Section 141c, number 3, are extinguished and void after a year. This period of prescription begins at the close of the calendar year in which the claim arose.

Section 141e. In the same manner as a commune, a larger communal union may also, according to the preceding provisions, through its constitutional organs, order the formation of registered Friendly Societies for its district, or for portions thereof, and oblige journeymen, assistants, as well as factory workers, to become members of such societies.

Section 141f. Workmen employed in mines, smelting works, and quarries or pits, and their employers, for whom there is no other legal obligation to form Friendly Societies, are to join the same, are also subject to the prescriptions of Sections 141 to 141e. Employers of the kind here referred to are assimilated to factory owners (Section 141c, No. 2). To workmen and employers who are members of Friendly Societies established by virtue of ordinances under the law of mines, the prescriptions of Sections 141 to 141c have no application.
payers

Appendix (K.)

Article 2.

Friendly Societies in regard to which there is established by virtue of this law an obligation for workmen in a trade to become members until it is otherwise determined by the central authority, are assimilated to registered Friendly Societies in the sense of Article 1. Meanwhile the obligation of becoming a member, as well as that of payment of contributions and subscriptions, remains in force for workmen and employers. If workmen or employers do not fulfil their obligations, the legal consequences prescribed by Sections 141a and 141c take effect.

Friendly Societies, in regard to which there is no established obligation for workmen in a trade to become members, if by authority of this law, and by virtue of the approval of the provincial authorities, they are in possession of the rights of legally recognised persons,* are assimilated to registered Friendly Societies, with respect to the freeing of their members from the obligations founded upon Section 141a. If one of the Friendly Societies referred to in this Article does not obtain its authorisation as a registered Friendly Society by the end of the year 1884, it will lose the aforesaid rights.

In testimony whereof is our Royal sign manual and the Imperial seal impressed hereto.

Given at Berlin, the 8th April 1876.

REGULATIONS BY THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR TRADE UNIONS.

TRADE UNION ACTS, 1871 and 1876.

IN pursuance of the powers vested in me by the above-mentioned Statutes, I, the Right Honourable Richard Assheton Cross, one of Her Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State, hereby revoke the Regulations made by the Right Honourable H. A. Bruce on the 8th December 1871, and the Right Honourable R. Lowe on the 18th August 1873, and make the following Regulations in lieu thereof:—

(1.) In the following Regulations and Forms the terms "Chief Registrar" and "Assistant Registrar" mean respectively the Chief Registrar and Assistant Registrar of Friendly Societies, and the term "Central Office" means the Central Office established under the Friendly Societies Act, 1875.

(2.) The Registrar shall not register a Trade Union under a name identical with that of any other existing Trade Union known to him, whether registered or not registered, or so nearly resembling such a name as to be likely to deceive the members or the public.

(4.) Application for registry of a Trade Union shall be made in Form A. subjoined to these Regulations, and shall be accompanied by two printed copies of the Rules marked and signed, as mentioned in the said Form.

(5.) The certificate of Registry of a Trade Union shall be in Form B. subjoined to these Regulations.

(6.) An alteration of the rules of a Trade Union may be either—

A partial alteration, consisting of the addition of a new rule or part of a rule or rules to the existing rules, or of the substitution of a new rule or part of a rule or rules for any of the existing rules, or of a rescission of any of the existing rules or any part thereof without any substitution, or of more than one or all of those modes; or,

(b.) A complete alteration consisting of the substitution of an entire set of rules for the existing set of rules.

(7.) An application for the registration of a partial alteration of rules must be made by seven members of the Trade Union, and must be made in the Form C. annexed hereto, and must be accompanied by a statutory declaration in Form D. hereto annexed, and by a printed copy of the existing rules, and by the following documents:—

(a.) If the partial alteration consists of the addition or substitution of a new rule or part of a rule or rules, two copies of such rule or part of a rule or rules, each copy being marked O. and signed by each of the applicants.

(b.) If the partial alteration consists of the rescission of any of the rules without any substitution, two copies of the resolution for such rescission, each copy being marked O. and signed by each of the applicants.

The Registrar, before registering the partial alteration of rules, shall ascertain that the rules of the Trade Union, if altered in accordance with the proposed partial alteration, will provide for all the matters required by the above-mentioned Acts to be provided for by the rules of a registered Trade Union.

(8.) The certificate of registry of a partial alteration shall be in Form E. annexed hereto, and shall be delivered to the applicants, attached to one of the copies of the new rule or rules, or, when the alteration consists of rescission merely, attached to the old set of rules.

(a) There is a class for provision after 65 years of age, but only eight members belong to that class.

(b) None at present, but it is hoped that the honorary members' fund may accumulate, so as to admit a small weekly allowance to be given to benefit members over 70, if unable to work.

(a) Superannuated allowance for sick members, 1s. 6 d. per week.

(b) This society is unable to state the number of its members, the books having been irregularly kept, the treasurer removed, and the other officers and committee changed. Notwithstanding that 40 per cent. of the gross collections is deducted for expenses of management, it appears that these expenses exceeded the sum thus allotted by 255 l. 18 s. 3 d.; the result of which is that, whereas the benefit funds are stated at 403 l. 18 s. 8 d., the total assets amount only to 176 l. 18 s. 3 d. The amount paid in benefit during the year was 550 l. 12 s. 8 d., and the expenses of management, 791 l. 12 s. 7½ d.

(c) This return is not signed by the auditors, who furnish a report to the effect that the return is "correctly stated, sufficiently vouched, and in accordance with law," with the exception of a payment of 8 s. by the treasurer, for which he can produce no voucher.
